ASSASSIN EDUCATED

Queen Olga Unable to Start at Once
From Athens Owing to Prostration at News of Her Husband's Murder—All England Goes into Mourning for the Dead.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Janina, March 19.—Constantine, the new king of Greece, left for Saloniki today after handing over to General Dangliss the chief command of the Greek army.

When the telegram announcing the tragedy was read to him last night the prince was unable fully to grasp its purport. After it had been read to him a second time he burst into tears and for a considerable time he was quite overcome with grief.

Carried in State.
The body of the late King George of Greece was enshrouded today and removed from the hospital to the palace on a stretcher borne by his son Prince Nicholas and several superior officers of the Greek army. The stretcher was followed by a procession, consisting of regular troops, clergy, civilians, Cretans, Greeks and people of the various Balkan races in a paleidoscopic variety of costumes.

Queen Overcome.
Athens, March 19.—Queen Olga of Greece was too prostrated by the news of the fate of her husband to sail for Saloniki last night, but she left today.

When her sons, Prince George, and Prince Andre, communicated the news of the tragedy to her she fell fainting in their arms and only recovered to swoon again. This happened several times and physicians were called in to quiet her.

Royal Family Starts.
All the princes and princesses of the royal family accompanied their mother to Saloniki. State mourning has been ordered for a period of six months and court mourning for a year.

On public and other buildings the national flag flies at half mast and is draped with crepe. The bells of all the churches in the city were tolled all day and minute guns were fired from the forts. The population is overwhelmed. All the newspapers are printed with black borders and contain long eulogies of the dead monarch.

Alexandra Shocked.
London, Eng., March 19.—Queen Mother Alexandra, sister of the murdered king of Greece, has recovered from the first shock of her brother's tragic death and is giving personal attention to the flood of sympathetic messages received from all parts of the world. King George of England joined her early today and remained with her until afternoon.

The flags on all public buildings in London were at half mast today. During the change of guard at St. James palace, opposite Marlborough House, the regimental band played the "Dead March from Saul."

Go into Mourning.
The British court will go into full mourning for three weeks and into half mourning for another week.

The Greek minister on leaving Marlborough House today said his advice assured him not only that the king's assassin was of unsound mind, but also that the man was intoxicated at the time of the outrage. It was clear, he declared, that no political significance could be attached to the crime.

Educated Man.

New York, March 19.—Aleco Schinas, the assassin of King George of Greece, was a man of education and a confirmed anarchist, according to information obtained by Demogrius N. Botassi, Greek consul in this city. The man made a grand entrance to the king. Mr. Botassi was told today by Greeks in this city who knew Schinas, because the government had closed a school of anarchism which Schinas had established at Volo, the chief city of Thessaly, where Schinas was born. "Schinas, I have been told by countrymen who knew him well, was a much more intelligent type of man than is indicated by the news dispatches," said the consul.

Aleco Schinas, murderer of King George I of Greece, appears to have lived much abroad. He returned to this city only when it was occupied by the Greek army after the surrender of the Turkish garrison.

The premeditation of the deed appears to have been an established fact because Schinas lurked in hiding and rushed out from his hiding place only six feet from the king and fired point blank into the back of the king. The shooting occurred only a few yards from the police headquarters.

Shot Hits King.

Lieut. Colonel Francodis, the king's aide-de-camp, who was walking by the side of his royal master, immediately drew his revolver, but the assassin fired and the aide-de-camp was shot dead.

When the assassin had been arrested he turned to King George, whom he supposed escaped unscathed, and was horrified to find his master stricken by the road side. Francodis raised the stricken monarch but the king was unconscious and never spoke again.

Dies Immediately.

Soldiers who had heard the firing rushed to the scene and raised the king from the ground and carried him to a hospital. He expired on the way without regaining consciousness. When questioned by the police, Schinas replied: "You have courts, I will stand trial. When pressed to say what the motive of his crime was, he replied, 'Take me to the police station so that the crowd shall not maltreat me. I will speak there.' On reaching the police station he gave his name and a few particulars about himself.

Wilson's Condolence.

Washington, March 19.—President Wilson's first act today was to send a message of condolence to the widowed queen of the late King George of Greece. It read as follows:

"Her Majesty, Olga Queen of the Hellenes, Athens. I am inexpressibly shocked to hear of the terrible crime which has resulted in the death of the King and I offer to your majesty, to the royal family and to the Grecian nation, the sincere condolences of the government and the people of the United States and to express my own deep sympathy. Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States."

Few European rulers of modern times have had a more interesting and eventful career than George I, King of the Hellenes. He was born December 24, 1845, as the second son of Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Gluecksburg, who became King of Denmark in 1863, and Princess Louisa, daughter of King Carl XV. of Sweden and Norway. In baptism the young prince received the name Christian William Ferdinand Adolphus George and he was simple Prince William, without prospects of fortune when he entered the naval service of Denmark as midshipman.

The young prince had made one or two cruises and was on the point of starting on another, when in October, 1862, a revolution broke out at Patras and Varizna which, two days later, reached Athens. King Otto, of the Bavarian house, who had occupied the throne of Greece for thirty years, lost his throne in three days. He calmly retired to Bohemia, where he died five years later, apparently without regretting the loss of his throne.

The European powers were puzzled how to replace Otto. The crown of the Hellenes was first offered to Prince Alfred of England, second son of Queen Victoria, but the English government declined the offer. It was then offered to Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, who also declined it. Then it was that at the suggestion of M. de Chaudordy, minister of foreign affairs of the French government, proposed to the other powers to offer the throne of Greece to Prince William then in his teens. Russia and England approved of the choice and the other powers followed suit.

The young prince was elected King of the Hellenes by the National Assembly at Athens, March 18, 1863, and accepted the crown, through his father, acting as his guardian. June 4, 1863, he was declared of age by decree of the National Assembly, June 27, 1863, and landed in Greece on November 2, of the same year, greeted with enthusiasm by the population.

The first few years of his reign were comparatively peaceful and his marriage on October 27, 1867, to Olga Constantinovna, eldest daughter of Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, brother of the late Emperor Alexander II, greatly strengthened his position and added to the popularity of the young ruler. But the king's popularity soon began to wane because of the unfortunate interference of the political parties of Greece and the boundless corruption of the officials, who maintained a spoils system that led to frequent disturbances and popular outbreaks.

Greece became involved in financial difficulties and King George was powerless to enforce the financial reforms which he advocated and urged to his parliament. Only with great difficulty did the king succeed in preventing Greece from becoming involved in war with Turkey during the troubles in the Balkan peninsula in 1876 and in 1886, and the revolution at Philippopolis and the Servo-Bulgarian war only the firm attitude of England prevented the Delyannis Cabinet from precipitating Greece into a war with the Porte.

Once more, in 1897, trouble arose and the Delyannis Cabinet forced the king to go to war against Turkey. Although he knew that Greece was not prepared for war and was certain of defeat, "the war was short and would have been disastrous for Greece, had not the other European powers come to the rescue and put a stop to further hostilities. Not from any consideration for the Greek nation, but out of friendship for the king and his family, did the powers intervene, forcing Turkey to accept terms of peace which were more favorable for Greece than for the victorious Turks.

This seemed to bring the Greeks to their senses and make them realize how much they owed to their king. George I, immediately before the war the most unpopular and almost despised man in Greece, so disliked in fact, that even an attempt was made to shoot him and his daughter Marie, while they were driving, became a popular hero and he and his family were idolized by the easily swayed people. In their enthusiasm for the royal family the people even forgave the king that he had accumulated a large fortune by successful industrial enterprises and stock speculations in Paris and Brussels.

The king's eldest son, Crown Prince Constantine, was married at Athens on October 20, 1889 to Princess Sophie of Prussia, a sister of Emperor William and his second son, Prince George, appointed High Commissioner in Crete after the war, married Princess Marie Bonaparte in 1907. The other children of the king also became connected by marriage with the reigning houses of Russia and Great Britain.

Planned Abdication.
Copenhagen, Denmark, March 19.—Late King George of Greece had intended to abdicate the throne and live the quiet life of a retired gentleman after the conclusion of peace, according to a letter from him received here today.

The recipient is a naval officer who was an intimate friend of the murdered ruler.

BELIEVES "WITCHCRAFT" WILL CURE BABY'S BLINDNESS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Shelbytown, March 19.—A case of genuine "witchcraft" has been unearthed here by a local doctor who found a baby with eyes falling from certain growths curable by simple means. However, the only treatment the family would permit was the visits three times a day of a Jewish woman looking like the traditional witch who pronounced incantations over the child and blew her breath in its eyes. The baby is two years old and will soon be blind. The people are devout Lutherans, but will not obey the physicians.

Report Turkish Victory.
Constantinople, March 19.—A victory is officially claimed by the Turkish forces in a twenty-four hour battle which lasted until early today along the Tschatalja line.

The Turkish troops took the offensive, opening the attack by an advance of their right wing, which proceeded as far as Sivaskud Kalkfakui. Large forces of Bulgarians were encountered at those three places and during some speed along the whole front. The Turkish troops drove the Bulgarians from their trenches and took possession.

The Turkish center then advanced and began the fight in front, from which they routed the Bulgarians at the point of the bayonet. Other columns of Turkish troops captured several points held by the Bulgarians to the south of the Turkish line. The casualties have not yet been ascertained by the commanders, but it is declared that the losses of both armies is heavy.

Two Turkish aeroplanes flew over the scene of the battle throughout the day, reconnoitering the Bulgarian position and signalling the movement of the enemy to the Turkish commanders.

Get 100 Cents Value for Every Dollar You Spend.

By John P. Fallon.

A dollar is worth 100 cents value in everything you buy, but do you always get "value received?"

You can give or take from the value of a dollar by the way in which you spend it. Your pleasures in life, your standing and influence in the community depend largely upon the value you place on every dollar you own and the value you get on every dollar you spend.

Dollars spent unwisely lose their full purchasing power and value to you; careful spending and systematic saving will enable you to secure "value received" and future independence.

You will secure full value for every dollar you spend by reading the advertisements in THE GAZETTE closely and constantly every day. THE GAZETTE'S advertisements will tell you of the best purchasing opportunities and direct you to the most reliable stores in Janesville.

ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE DRAFTS LABOR BILL

Payment of Wages Semi-monthly Aff-fecting All Corporations in State
Embodied in Proposed Measure.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., March 19.—Payment of wages semi-monthly is provided for in a bill that is being drafted by the assembly committee on labor, of which Assemblyman George W. Bingham of Adams county is chairman. So many measures were introduced in the assembly embracing so many different phases of the wage question that it was necessary for the committee to offer a combination bill embracing the most important idea in each proposed law.

Paid on Discharge.
The committee bill which will be presented to the house in a few days, provides first that wages shall be paid immediately upon the discharge or resignation of an employee. This part of the measure is of particular importance to labor camps, where it is claimed that wages are not always paid when the men are discharged. The bill also guards against the payment at a different place than where the men are employed.

Another important feature of the combination bill is that the semi-monthly payment feature does not apply to agricultural employees or to employers who hire less than three employees. The bill permits employers to make a contract for the payment of wages weekly or even daily. The employer is made liable for damages for failure to pay the employee at the time specified in the law. Willful neglect to make immediate payment when the wages are due is made a misdemeanor under the terms of the bill, punishable by either a fine or a prison sentence.

Broad Application.
In its application the bill is broad. It applies to all corporations and people who hire labor in the state. At the present time the railroads pay their employees monthly, and this measure calls for a semi-monthly payment. It is said when the committee bill is up for hearing it will meet with strong opposition. Assemblyman Bingham and the committee on labor have been working on the measure for nearly three weeks and believe that it is as nearly perfect as it is possible to get it before holding a hearing upon it. The committee expects to schedule the bill for hearing next week.

NO OLD MEN FOUND IN WILSON CABINET

Average Age is Fifty Years and Six Months—Secretary of Commerce
Redfield is the Senior.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., March 19.—Today's birthday anniversary of Secretary of State Bryan has served to call public attention to the fact that all the members of the Wilson cabinet are comparatively young men. Their average age is fifty years and six months, whereas the ages of the members of the Taft cabinet averaged almost fifty-nine years. The oldest member of President Wilson's official family is Secretary of Commerce Redfield, who will be fifty-five years old next June. Mr. Bryan, at fifty-three, is the next in the order of seniority. Attorney General McReynolds, Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Secretary of Labor Wilson have just turned fifty, while Secretary of the Treasury MacAdoo, Secretary of War Garrison, Secretary of the Interior Lane, Secretary of Agriculture Houston and Postmaster General Burleson have not quite reached the half-century mark. In marked contrast were the ages of the Taft cabinet officials. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson was seventy-eight and Secretary of Treasury MacVeagh seventy-two. Postmaster General Hitchcock and Secretary of War Shinn were the only members under fifty years of age.

THREE PERSONS DIE IN INCENDIARY FIRE

Burning of Fateful House in Chicago
Today Costs Three Lives—Scene of Tragic Deaths.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, March 19.—The tragic position of the "House of Death" at 2359 Wentworth Avenue, closed early today with its destruction by an incendiary fire in which three lives were lost. Frank Custella and his brother-in-law, Joseph Cavallieri, with several others, jumped from a second story window, but Mrs. Custella and his daughter, ages three and eight, years were overcome by the smoke when they reached the window and perished in flames. The house gained its fatal name in the neighborhood because of the fatalities which have occurred in it during the last ten years. A decade ago Herbert Warner opened a meat market in the place which in a short space of time his entire family died and he committed suicide. Warner's clerk, Fred Kunz, then took the house, but shortly afterwards his little daughter was scalded to death in a pickling vat and a week after this Kunz was found dead under mysterious circumstances.

Head of Trainmen's Brotherhood
Holds Conference With Railway
Managers to Avert Chicago Strike.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, March 19.—Traffic on nineteen railways entering Chicago, including the principal eastern and western trunk lines, may be tied up today in the case of failure of A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of American Trainmen, to reach an agreement with the general managers. The switchmen and switch-tenders are also involved. They demand time and a half for overtime, on Sunday and holidays, and semi-monthly pay days. At a meeting at four o'clock yesterday afternoon it was found that only two hundred men out of 6,423 had voted against the strike. Arbitration of the matter was left to the executive committee composed of twenty-five railway men. If no agreement is reached, an effort will be made to prevent a walk-out by use of the Erdmann act. A strike would affect nearly all freight moving in and out of Chicago.

CHARGE BIG FRAUDS AGAINST IMPORTERS

Antonio Musica and Three Sons Arrested in New Orleans—Firm
Thrown into Bankruptcy.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, March 19.—Antonio Musica, wealthy importer of hair goods, charged by a score of banks with invoice frauds, estimated at a million dollars, was arrested today in New Orleans with his three sons, Philip, George and Arthur. All fled the city last week when cases of "extra fine" hair on which they had negotiated money advances were found to contain "scraps."

The father and his son, Philip, already have been indicted and will be brought to New York at once. The firm was thrown into bankruptcy today.

Antonio Musica is nearly 70 years old and the son, Philip, is about 30. For years they were importers of cheese. In 1910 the government charged them with underweighing frauds and Philip shielding his father shouldered the blame, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a year's imprisonment. Shortly afterward his sentence was commuted by President Taft and returning to New York he again became associated with his father in business. Hair goods now became their specialty, and banks for months negotiated their paper without question until recently discovered loss to the reputation of a draft, the attachment of their property charge of criminal manipulation of invoices involving hundreds of thousands, then the flight of the entire family, including two daughters.

TWO BANDITS ENTER A PLEA OF GUILTY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, March 19.—Robert Webb and Thomas Burke, two leaders of the auto bandits, who terrorized this city during the winter, pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary today and were sentenced to prison under the indeterminate sentence law which imposes a minimum of one year and a maximum of 21 years.

Webb is alleged to have killed detective Peter Hart, but State Attorney Roynes was disinclined to press this charge. He said that Webb never had a chance. The bandit's mother went insane and his father was a diplomat.

The first auto bandit robbery since the arrest of Robert Webb and a number of his associates a month ago, occurred early today when the Plaza restaurant on the south side was robbed and $50 taken. Two well dressed young men, after eating breakfast a few blocks from the Plaza, telephoned for a taxicab.

The chauffeur, James Fitzgerald, then took them to State and Madison streets where they paid their fares and hurried away through the crowd.

NAMING OF SENATOR TO ILLINOIS VOTERS BY NEW AMENDMENT

Speculation at Washington in Regard to Effect of Ratification of Direct Election Law on Illinois Deadline.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, March 19.—With the ratification of only three states necessary to insure the adoption of the proposed constitutional amendment for the direct election of senators, speculation was heard at the capitol today in regard to the effect of the adoption of the amendment upon the senatorial contest in Illinois. At present two senatorial vacancies exist in that state, but the legislature has been deadlocked many weeks.

The consensus of opinion was that the ratification of the amendment by three more states and the subsequent proclamation by the secretary of state that the amendment had been adopted would deprive the Illinois legislature of power to elect senators.

Prepare Tariff Plan.

Quick tariff revision along lines acceptable to the democratic leaders of both houses of congress was the object of a conference called for today between the ranking tariff revisionists of the party and in the senate and the house. House democrats are confident they have framed a tariff measure that will be a faithful conformant to the party platform and that it will run the gamut of both houses without much difficulty.

Regards Chinese Loan.

President Wilson's statement of the administration's attitude toward American bankers' participation in the Chinese loan and foreign loans generally has attracted widespread comment and discussion in official and diplomatic quarters.

Following closely upon the statement come imitations that the negotiations now may proceed as a five power affair without the American group.

LEGISLATOR'S TEMPER IS TRIED IN DEBATE

Assemblymen Spoor and Everett Exchange Challenges, Everett Later
Making An Apology.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, March 19.—Evidence of bitter feeling on pending bills was given in the assembly. Assemblyman Spoor of Berlin, resented a personal allusion by Assemblyman Everett who referred to a "charming widow" who he said had lobbied for the Spoor bill, changing the method of appointment of the state board of agriculture.

This led Spoor to remark he would meet Everett later. Mr. Everett apologized and the incident closed. The assembly refused to reconsider the vote.

In debate on the consideration of the bill abolishing the plea of sole contumacious assemblyman Conway charged the committee report had been "doctored." Judge Rosa and Chairman Hurlbut denied the charge and the personalities grew so heated that the chair admonished the members of the judiciary to limit their remarks to the bill.

Chairman Allison of the assembly exise committee protested against indefinite postponement of nearly all bills regulating the liquor business. He said many of the bills were meritorious and progressive.

Assembly bills ordered engrossed included: Allowing cities to transfer to the United States government land needed for improving inner harbors; allowing towns to increase liquor license fees from $200 to $250; requiring railroads to equip hospital wards in baggage cars; taxing automobiles on horse power basis.

SEEKS TO PLACE A BAN

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, Wis., March 19.—Senator Ackley of Chippewa Falls, who confesses he likes to dance as well as anybody, has a theory that dances held indiscriminately in connection with the university and public schools work no good to the participants. He had a bill prohibiting the university junior prom as well as class dances in all state-aided institutions. It was recommended for indefinite postponement and when it came up for action on the senate calendar he offered an amendment designed still further to exclude dances from the school life. The amendment prohibits dances being held during vacations or between semesters, and

LOCAL DEBATERS WIN THE LEAGUE HONORS

DEFEAT RACINE BY UNANIMOUS DECISION AT BELLOIT AND LOSE TWO TO ONE AT RACINE.

NEGATIVE IS STRONG

Both Negative Teams Win on Question of Diminishing United States Expenditures for Navy.

Debaters representing the Janesville high school won the championship of the Beloit college debating league defeating Racine in the contest Tuesday. The local negative team by a unanimous decision at Beloit yesterday afternoon insured the laurels for Janesville and the affirmative team made a good showing at Racine last night although they lost by a two to one decision.

The members of the negative team, Dearborn, Smiley and Noyes went to Beloit on the ten o'clock car this morning and received the handsome silver trophy with which the college rewards the winning school. The cup was presented by President Eason at the regular college chapel service at eleven-thirty in the presence of the entire student body. Members of the affirmative team, which debated at Racine, were unable to return in time for the presentation.

The total number of decisions received by the locals was four to Racine's two. In percentage, the local negative team at Beloit received a majority of 14 per cent. The affirmative although defeated in decision, received an advantage of one per cent, giving the Janesville school the lead in decisions and also in percentage.

Hardy Steelholm opened the debate for the Racine affirmative at Beloit. He outlined the question placing upon the negative an interpretation stating that the navy was divided in two sections, the "business" navy and the "war" navy. His line of argument was based on this interpretation. He attempted to prove that the war navy was no longer necessary, but that the business navy was very essential. In stating this, he gave the negative just what they wanted. In rebuttal, the negative admitted this, and so the first affirmative speech amounted to little.

Charles Noyes opened the line of arguments for the negative. His main object was to hold true to the wording of the question, and to impress on the affirmative, that the United States is a great world power, and that they should be able to protect the smaller people of the western hemisphere who are unable to have naval force. This was an answer to the "business" navy brought up by Hardy Steelholm. Mr. Noyes stated that the Panama canal must be kept a neutral waterway and that the Monroe Doctrine was one of the forces to be upheld by a navy. The arguments were forceful, and so stated, that the affirmative failed to come back and throw the arguments aside. In fact throughout the debate, the Racine team failed to refute Janesville's arguments, and this is undoubtedly the main reason why they were defeated.

Elmer Miller continued the debate for the affirmative. He made a fine appearance for a debater, as he was in knee pants, and was only fifteen years old. His speech was given in a very well, and the audience applauded him many times. He brought up a chart, showing the expense of wars past, which made the negative think some to arrange a rebuttal.

Russell Smiley continued the negative case. He defined arbitration and its relation to world peace. To prove that arbitration was not a successful method of promoting peace today or in the past, he reviewed many treaties which have been broken. He stated that the affirmative must prove the impossibility of war, and the improbability of its improvement over the last debate was very noticeable.

Russell Frank concluded the main arguments for the affirmative. He brought out two charts showing the cost of armed peace. Extravagance was his plea, but it was no argument, as Noyes came back in rebuttal and completely cast it aside, by stating that the question read for a decrease in our navy in favor of world peace, and had nothing to do with extravagance, and Allen Dearborn concluded the main arguments for the negative. He argued that the United States have an enormous coast line to defend, a coast line of 21,000 miles. His arguments were divided well. Other arguments advanced by him was that battleships are cheaper than battles, that the United States ranks among the leaders in commerce, and that the navy is the most economical guarantee of peace. His oratory was good and he closed the negative with fine expression.

The negative immediately came back strong in rebuttal, by knocking extravagance and stating clearly that the United States needed a navy for protecting her national honor, and for national defense. The affirmative rebuttal was exceptionally strong on the line of argument which they pursued, but they failed to answer the negative heartily hoped for the time being, spoke in kind words that the negative heartily hoped the time when arbitration could be successful, stating that the negative were not for war, but for peace. Dearborn concluded the negative in rebuttal by answering the affirmative argument on our position to diminish. The Janesville boys did their best, and they not only won in arguments, but in oratory. The only thing the Janesville trio did not like was the fact that only three from Janesville witnessed the debate.

Stanley Judd and his team took their defeat at Racine in a most creditable manner. Janesville was at some disadvantage in having both teams away from home, while one Racine team was at home. Mohr and Kuhlow had very strong main speeches, and Judd held his own in the last rebuttal by pointing many affirmative points.

This year in debating at the Janesville high school is the most successful in the school's history. Last year the locals were represented in the semi-finals, but failed to reach the finals. Now the debaters are happy, and will be ready to repeat their performance next year on the forensics platform.

FIND SHORT WEIGHT IS GIVEN IN BUTTER

One Pound Packages: Wrapped at Creamery Mostly Below Standard—Scaler Helms Files Report.

Short weights in butter are comparatively frequent according to the quarterly report of City Scaler of Weights and Measures Walter Helms, just filed with the City Clerk. The samples inspected in each instance were sealed as one pound packages and were taken from seven grocery stores and from one creamery, and were weighed five at a time. Fifty samples weighed at the Shurtliff creamery in this city weighed a few ounces more than fifty pounds. Lots of five weighed at the grocers from other creameries, were short from three sixteenths of an ounce to ten and one sixteenth ounces. The discrepancy is accounted for in part by the evaporation of the moisture in the butter, and in part by inaccurate measuring and cutting devices in use. The creameries from which the short weight packages were received have been informed and promised to correct their standards. Individual samples were found that were of proper weight, and some with excess weight.

The report of Scaler Helms covers the period from December 1, 1912 to March 1, 1913, and is a detailed report of his inspections and findings day by day. Most of his time since the first of the year has been devoted to the inspection of milk and wagon scales, weights used in their operation and lineal measures, the yard sticks, tapes, and measuring standards on the counters of stores where dry goods are sold. Liquid measures, oyster measures, computing scales, and automatic measuring pumps also came in for their share of attention.

Three hundred and nine scales were inspected in the period covered by the report. Thirteen liquid measures were inspected, of which number three were condemned. Out of twenty-four platform scales inspected fourteen were adjusted. Two hundred and seventy weights were sealed, forty-six adjusted, and one condemned. The number of lineal measures sealed was three hundred and forty-five. Eighteen were condemned for repairs as many adjusted, and six confiscated. Three loads of coal were re-weighed, and one over-weight. An inventory of the standards and tools in the possession of the scaler is given in the report, together with expenses incurred in the performance of his duties.

JANESVILLE MAY HAVE "SCOOT" CAR TO MILWAUKEE

There are at the present time at the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul yards in Milwaukee, three gasoline cars which are expected to be put in service within a short time. It has been rumored that one of these is to take the place of the morning milk train that has proven unsatisfactory for travelers to Milwaukee. It is proposed to have the car make an early morning trip to Milwaukee from here and returning in the evening. This change would be welcome to Milwaukee visitors and would afford them excellent service. One of these cars is certain to be put in use between Waukesha and Milwaukee, and it is understood that the other is to run between Whitewater and the Cream City. While there is nothing official been done at the present time, the cars are there and these runs are the most probable.

The cars are seventy feet in length having a capacity of sixty passengers and a limited amount of freight and baggage. The propelling power is furnished by the most modern type of gasoline engine.

SUPERINTENDENT INSPECTS C. AND M. DIVISION

The newly appointed superintendent of the Chicago and Milwaukee division and a party of division officers spent yesterday afternoon on an inspection tour. The party consisted of E. W. Morris, superintendent; G. Westcott, trainmaster; A. L. Heiselbough, R. H. Slizer, trainmaster; A. W. Wolf, chief carpenter, and A. H. Hoibert, roadmaster. The party left on a special train at eight o'clock for Chicago.

NORTHWESTERN TO BUILD NEW STEEL ORE DOCKS

The Northwestern railway will build another ore dock east of its present docks at Ashland next winter according to information received recently. It will be constructed entirely of steel and concrete and will cost $1,000,000. The ore business of the Northwestern has been increasing each year and its two docks have been coming to take care of it. During the coming season the same road will add 7,000 new ore cars to its equipment, to be used for the traffic between mines and lake ports. The first shipment has already arrived and the remainder will be brought north before the opening of navigation.

There are five new engines at the South Janesville yards at the present time awaiting the ore season to open up in the northern part of the state. They are of the very latest type of freight engines and have traction power of many thousands of pounds, and are built for speed and power.

DIVER BEGINS WORK IN SWIFT CURRENT

Braves Cold Water to Remove Obstructions at Coffey Dams of Upper Railroad Bridge.

Braving the swift current and cold water, Charles Anderson, the diver who was brought from Chicago to aid in the building of the new railroad bridge across Rock river, started to work yesterday afternoon and took the old tree stump and rocks out of the river bed which had stopped the work of laying the sheet-piling for the coffer dam.

The sight of seeing the diver in action caused a crowd to gather on the structure and watch the human fish in his work this morning. Dressed with a complete rubber suit and steel helmet the diver worked taking out portions of the crib that protected one of the piers. Air is supplied to him while under water by a pump which is operated by two men, the air being forced in a long tube which is connected to the hood of the suit. This suit is of canvas and rubber with the exception of the head piece. This is of steel and has four glass openings which enables him to see while under water. The head piece is detachable and has the opening for the air hose. Great precaution is taken while the helmet is worn with the air tube for any accident, as catching the helmet, is sure to prove fatal, besides having a line which is used to tear out the planks and rocks of the cribbing, the diver is equipped with a signal rope whereby he makes known his wants to a helper.

When asked how the weather was down there he smiled and said, "Fine, but cold." While the current on the surface is very swift the large crib which is jacked out from the pier breaks the current and makes it easier to work below the water. Mr. Anderson was engaged in the work of making way for the sheeting this morning and would stay under water fifteen or twenty minutes when he would come for a rest or to tell his helpers his wants. While the suit is water-proof the diver is forced to work in water only a few degrees above freezing point. The swift current necessitates the diver's wearing lead weights around his waist and Mr. Anderson had over eighty pounds of such weights on his belt. The river at this point is from sixteen to twenty feet deep but as the crib on the bottom of the river extends up about five feet the diver is only working under ten feet of water.

The diver's services will be needed for some time yet for it is expected that the work of removing portions of the crib will take considerable time and the condition of the river bed at the other coffer dam has not yet been determined. There is a report that there were two old barges sunk at this point in the early history of the city and the builders may have the misfortune to strike these which will cause delay and more work for the diver. The work of pumping the water out of the first coffer dam was halted and it was found that the two small pumps were insufficient to compete with the current and pressure and the water came through the planks almost as fast as it could be pumped out. It is expected that dirt will have to be added to make the dam more water-proof.

Brings up Big Rock.

Shortly before eleven o'clock there was discovered a rock weighing over a ton and a half in the way of the sheeting and it was found necessary to remove it before further work could be done. Mr. Anderson took the situation in hand and in the short space of fifteen minutes had the block and chain around the rock and it was successfully hauled to the barge by the pile driver.

ALUMNI SEEK TO REVENGE DEFEATS

Games Between High School and Alumni Basketball Teams Will Be For City Championship.

What promises to be the most bitterly fought basketball game of the season will take place at the rink Saturday night, between the champion high school team and the alumni. Although the graduates have been defeated decisively in two games the players feel sure that when the school boys come to play on the rink floor and meet hard opposition the tables will be turned. The high school has had little trouble in trimming any team in this section of the country. The truth is that they have won their games in an almost too easy a manner. There has been a considerable amount of rivalry on the part of the two teams and their meeting will not only decide the city championship but settle a long argued question of which team is superior.

The line up of the alumni will be: Green and Cunningham, forwards; Wilkerson, center; Langdon and Brown, guards; and Janesville basketball fans are well aware of their playing strength. The high school is in the pink of condition, having been training since the opening of the season. The students of the high school are predicting another trimming for the "grads," but the outcome of the game on the big rink floor is doubtful.

The game will furnish the high school team with the best possible kind of practice and experience than to playing on a large floor. As the high school are candidates for the tournament held annually at Appleton where all contests are staged at the Armory Hall, which has a playing court larger than the students have played on this year, with the possible exception of the Beloit College floor. While the game is a practice for the high school, it will be some practice and the best bet is they won't run away from the Alumni as they have with neighboring high school teams.

COMPENSATION ACT AMENDMENT OPPOSED

Objections Entered to Proposal to Abolish Defense of Contributory Negligence.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., March 19.—Opposition developed to the Bingham bill yesterday proposing amendments to the workmen's compensation act. F. W. Walker, general manager of the Milwaukee Northern Railway company, Neal Brown of Wausau, Judge Paul Carpenter of Milwaukee, representing the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association spoke against any changes in the law until it had been given a further trial. Many of the more important features proposed were defeated by Chairman Charles Crownhart of the Industrial commission and William Mauche of Fond du Lac.

The amendment to do away with the defense of contributory negligence met with the greatest opposition. Chairman Crownhart pointed out that the defense had been abrogated as to employments covered by the compensation act, in Arizona, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio and Rhode Island.

"Representing the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, we feel very strongly this amendment should not be made," said Judge Carpenter. "There has been a test of a little over a year. We think it would be better if the industrial commission would go ahead and administer the present law for another two years."

In response to a question by Mr. Walker, Chairman Crownhart said that there were 95,000 employes now under the act. He said there had been but five withdrawals with $52 employes. He declared that at the present time over 50 per cent of the employes of the state engaged in dangerous occupations were now under the workmen's compensation act.

The provision in favor of placing all employers under the compensation act unless they elect to stay out, found in the Bingham bill and also in the Holmes bill was approved by Chairman Crownhart. He said that a similar provision is found in the acts in Illinois and New Jersey. It proposes to make it easier for employers to accept the compensation act. He believed that many small employers who do not take the trouble to file notice of election, would not affirmatively reject the act.

THREE GO TO JAIL FOR DRUNKEN FIGHT

Sam Cooley, Jr., Louis Mulcairns and Henry Watson Were Arrested Last Evening.

Henry Watson, Sam Cooley, Jr., and Louis Mulcairns were placed under arrest on Dodge street last night by two patrolmen after the station had been notified by telephone that the three were drunk and fighting and using bad language in front of the Buggs' saloon. They were arraigned before Judge Elfield this morning on a charge of intoxication, to which all pleaded guilty. They denied however, that they had been fighting, saying that they were only "fooling." Mulcairns and Cooley were not able to pay the fines of $5 and costs assessed against them and were sentenced to twelve days' imprisonment in the county jail. Watson had been in court on a similar charge a month ago, whereas the others had kept out for a considerable longer period. He was sent to jail for fifteen days in default of a fine of $8 and costs.

BUNCH DOZEN BILLS

ON COMMISSION LAW

Assembly Committee on Municipalities Considers Numerous Measures to Amend Present Statute.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., March 19.—A dozen bills amendatory of the commission government law were considered by the assembly committee on municipalities yesterday afternoon, and an agreement was tentatively reached to combine them into one for the sake of comprehensiveness and clarity.

It was agreed also to combine No. 958, by Mr. Gannon; No. 929, by I. N. Stewart; No. 894, by Mr. Nye, with No. 762, introduced by Mr. Gannon, which provide for the election of a vice-mayor or acting mayor under the commission form of government. These will be considered this afternoon.

This bill will also provide that a majority of the councilmen shall have power to act on all matters. Under the old charter law a three-quarter vote was required and it developed that in a council of three members, a unanimous vote was necessary. A two-thirds or majority vote, such as is wanted, gives such power to two of the three members.

The committee appeared to be unanimous in the opinion that proceedings of the council and notices of its meetings should be published in the daily papers in order to acquaint the citizens with all its actions. This is provided in the Nye bill, No. 112. Mr. Nye offered a substitute amendment making it apply to commission cities of all classes.

A bill by Assemblyman K. A. Johnson of Columbia county, makes it mandatory upon commission cities to create general departments of city affairs and requires a bond of councilmen for the faithful performance of duty. E. S. Baker of Portage, a commission-governed city, spoke for this amendment.

Assemblyman Nye and Cannon expressed disapproval of the Rosa bill, No. 133A, proposing to abolish the board of fire and police commissioners in commission cities. They said such boards had been valuable adjuncts of city government. Both had commendation for the efficiency and general spirit of harmony characterizing the present city commission in their home city.

TOWNSHIP ELECTION BILL IS DISCUSSED

Movement to Private an Official Election Considered in Committee Meeting—Other Town Matters.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., March 19.—A new idea in town and village elections was generated into a movement for a bill providing for the use of an official ballot in town and village elections. The senate yesterday took it with considerable avidity, judging from the temper revealed in the discussion, and its final passage seems probable.

Senator Perry's bill providing that at any town meeting any supervisor being a candidate for re-election should not be permitted to sit as an inspector of election, had been reported for indefinite postponement, but Senator Perry came to its defense by narrating experiences of towns in his district where employees of corporations, he said, were coerced into voting against their wishes.

Senator Richter followed, telling how in some towns in his district the tickets at town meetings were provided by the towns, the names of the candidates being placed in them by petition. Senator Randolph then proposed to relegate the old town meeting ballot to oblivion and devise an altogether new and better system. It was upon his motion that Senator Perry's bill and the various suggestions for change finally were referred to the committee on education and public welfare with the understanding that a new and comprehensive bill be drafted to embody the ideas advanced by the senators.

"HOWE'S PICTURES."

The myriad minded Shakespeare possessed a wonderful gift of prophecy. His mind conjured up visions of inventions that did not materialize until three centuries after his death; but even he would be astounded if he could see how truly "All the World's a Stage" at Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival which comes to the Myers Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, March 26 and 27, matinee Thursday.

Even the penetrating vision of the poet-prophet could not have conceived how amazingly true to life Mr. Howe's motion cameras depict human life, events and activities and perpetuates them on the screen.

The announcement that many of the scenes of the new program will be presented in the gorgeous magnicence of nature's colors, means that the legion of local admirers of Mr. Howe's attraction may expect a program that will eclipse any he has yet presented here. The perfect reproduction of natural colors simultaneously with form and movement implies really more than the imagination can conceive. It makes Mr. Howe's exhibition a still more wonderful counterpart of nature than it has been hitherto.

Even the penetrating vision of the poet-prophet could not have conceived how amazingly true to life Mr. Howe's motion cameras depict human life, events and activities and perpetuates them on the screen.

The announcement that many of the scenes of the new program will be presented in the gorgeous magnicence of nature's colors, means that the legion of local admirers of Mr. Howe's attraction may expect a program that will eclipse any he has yet presented here. The perfect reproduction of natural colors simultaneously with form and movement implies really more than the imagination can conceive. It makes Mr. Howe's exhibition a still more wonderful counterpart of nature than it has been hitherto.

TOWNSHIP ELECTION BILL IS DISCUSSED

Movement to Private an Official Election Considered in Committee Meeting—Other Town Matters.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., March 19.—A new idea in town and village elections was generated into a movement for a bill providing for the use of an official ballot in town and village elections. The senate yesterday took it with considerable avidity, judging from the temper revealed in the discussion, and its final passage seems probable.

Senator Perry's bill providing that at any town meeting any supervisor being a candidate for re-election should not be permitted to sit as an inspector of election, had been reported for indefinite postponement, but Senator Perry came to its defense by narrating experiences of towns in his district where employees of corporations, he said, were coerced into voting against their wishes.

Senator Richter followed, telling how in some towns in his district the tickets at town meetings were provided by the towns, the names of the candidates being placed in them by petition. Senator Randolph then proposed to relegate the old town meeting ballot to oblivion and devise an altogether new and better system. It was upon his motion that Senator Perry's bill and the various suggestions for change finally were referred to the committee on education and public welfare with the understanding that a new and comprehensive bill be drafted to embody the ideas advanced by the senators.

by the departed, was the officiating pastor, and paid an excellent tribute to his memory. Those who were honored to serve as pall-bearers, all members of Janesville Commandery No. 2, Knights Templar, were George Sutherland, R. M. Bostwick, W. F. Carle, James A. Fathers, Leo Brownell, Harry Garbutt, and J. P. Gregory. The beautiful Masonic ritual service was given at the grave at B. Matheson, prelate, and Leslie Bookout, commander, leading. The services at both home and Oak Hill cemetery were largely attended, and floral tributes were conspicuous both by their number and their great beauty. The contractors of the city attended in a body, as did also the members of the school board.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

Street Cleaning Under Way: With the vanishing of the last vestiges of ice and snow, Street Commissioner C. K. Millmore has begun a systematic campaign of street cleaning. The horse scraper is used to loosen the winter's accumulation of dirt and debris, piling it in windrows from which it can conveniently be shoveled into the dump wagons. It is noticeable that the oiled street came through the winter in the best condition.

Motor Truck Disabled: One of the motor trucks of the Pifford Lumber company broke down at the Myers hotel corner Tuesday afternoon. The driver was thrown from his seat when the front axle broke. The Rock river stood more than twenty-six inches over the government mark in the upper dam at eight o'clock this morning, and it level did not change materially during the day. At three o'clock yesterday afternoon it stood at twenty-three inches and rose steadily through the night. At Fulton on the Yahara river, the water is only seven inches over the crest of the dam, indicating that comparatively little flood water is being discharged from that stream into the Rock.

Complete Extension: The extension of the interurban freight station siding was completed today. The track extends out into the river for about forty feet, that portion being supported by sixteen piles. The pile driver finished work yesterday and was taken back to Rockford. The extension makes room for three cars.

Confessional Service: St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, corner South Academy and School streets, C. J. Koerner, pastor. There will be a confessional service tomorrow evening at seven-thirty followed by a celebration of the Lord's Supper.

Install Sprinkler System: The sprinkler system for fire protection is being installed at the Hanson Furniture factory. A seventy-five foot water tower will be erected.

Grass Fire: The fire department was called out at noon today to extinguish a grass fire at the corner of Wisconsin street and Oakland avenue. A strong wind was spreading the flames rapidly and it was feared that they would spread to a nearby dwelling. The fire was nearly out when the firemen arrived, although they made a quick response.

Marriage Licenses: Marriage licenses have been issued at the county clerk's office to the following: Charles H. Glendon and Josephine A. Bliss, both of Beloit; August Nightengale of Center and Mary Komplin of Plymouth; David Arnold and Eva Hudson, both of the town of Milton; Harry R. McIntosh and Clara Egan, both of Plymouth; and Gordon G. Isaac and Norma Strause, both of Edgerton.

LaPrairie Farm Sold: Mr. and Mrs. August Bohlin of this city have sold their farm in the town of LaPrairie to William C. Koffman for a consideration of $18,000, according to a deed filed in the register's office today.

DEBATE SIX HOURS TO ACQUIT BELDEN OF MURDER CHARGE

Jury Returns Verdict of "Not Guilty" Shortly After Eleven O'Clock Tuesday Night.

After a deliberation of over six hours the jury in the case of Louis Belden charged with the second degree murder of Edward P. Ryan on the 27th of February, returned a verdict of "not guilty." The jury retired at four o'clock Tuesday afternoon and did not arrive at a decision until after eleven o'clock. They were allowed one hour between six and seven for supper.

There were only a few in the courtroom when the jury came in. Belden and his mother and his two sisters, Mrs. Larsen of Stoughton and Miss Cora Belden of this city with several other friends awaited the announcement with breathless suspense. Foreman C. S. Crow of Beloit stated the verdict to Judge Grimm. Belden turned and kissed his mother and then stepped forward and thanked the jury. A few minutes later in the company of his relatives Belden walked from the courtroom a free man.

The case was tried with remarkable dispatch. A jury was secured Monday afternoon in little more than an hour and the first witnesses were examined for the state. A long list of witnesses were called upon to testify Tuesday but in spite of that the testimony was all received at half past two o'clock. The statements of counsel were concise and to the point and the instructions of Judge Grimm were business-like and to the point.

The jury which served on the case was composed as follows: C. O. Osgard, C. E. Brooks, W. F. Noble, H. F. Taylor, Henry Kemp, C. H. Hoffman, C. E. Ellis, E. C. Wilkins, S. C. Row, W. W. Swingle. The court dismissed the jurors from further attendance at this term of court unless drawn on the jury calendar which is set for trial Monday, March 31.

HAS ANKLE CRUSHED WHILE ON ELEVATOR

Roy Mason, Eighteen Years Old, Suffers Serious Injury at Lewis Knitting Works.

Roy Mason, aged eighteen, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Mason, 403 South Academy street, had the ankle of his right foot badly crushed about eight o'clock this morning while riding on the freight elevator at the Lewis Knitting Works, at which place he is employed. Mason backed onto the elevator with a truck to go to an upper floor. Another employee was operating the elevator at the time. Mason's foot was caught between the elevator platform and the floor above and as soon as he realized what had happened he informed his companion, who at once reversed the elevator. Mrs. George Fifield and E. F. Woods were at once called to attend the injured boy, who was promptly removed to Mercy hospital where an operation was performed. The father of young Mason, who did not know of the accident, met the ambulance down town and accompanied his son to the hospital. There it was found that one artery on the outside of the foot had been severed, the ligaments torn, and the ankle bones crushed. It will take some forty-eight hours to determine how serious the consequences of the accident will be.

It has been discovered that the Japanese troupe which was to have presented the closing program of the Apollo Club last Monday evening failed to put in an appearance owing to a mistake in the dating. They thought their appearance in Janesville was April 17th instead of March 17th and late yesterday notified President George S. Parker of the Apollo Club that they would do anything possible to make up for their mistake and be notified that they could appear next Monday evening. This will be a most pleasing entertainment and will formally close the present most successful year of the club.

The new quarters represent an expenditure of $20,000, and are equal in appointments to almost any in the northwest. A banquet followed the exercises. One thousand plates were laid at the Lakeside auditorium and the guests were seated at nine o'clock. E. Mortimer Walker acted as toastmaster. Among the prominent officers in attendance were National Grand Worthy President Frank E. Hering of South Bend, Indiana. Milwaukee and Kenosha delegations came in special cars. The Racine Aerie has a membership of 1200.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat BY RUTH CAMERON

EXPRESSING ONESELF.
THE OTHER day I read of a decorator who was extremely proud of a certain room which he had decorated. He had chosen and arranged the furniture and hangings, and even the woodwork of the floor and walls he had brought from Europe especially for that room. He considered the effect absolutely perfect, and when he heard that the woman who owned the house had bought some more furniture on her own hook and put it into the room, he was almost frantic.

You see, he considered that that room was his work. He felt that he had created it just as an artist creates a picture, or an author a book, and although he could not actually sign it as an artist or an author signs his work, he felt that it was signed by him. Therefore he resented having it changed and spoiled even by the legal owner of the house. And at the risk of antagonizing a valuable customer, he actually went to her and begged her to restore it.

I was deeply impressed by that little incident. For this reason, I wish more women felt toward their homes as that man felt toward his work, for they certainly have reason. A woman's home is her expression of herself. Her name is signed to it just as clearly as if she had painted a picture and written her initials in the corner of it.

A very clever young art student who was making a success of her profession, gave up her art to marry. At first she planned to do some work after marriage, but before long her hands were too full of nursing bottles and thermometers to leave room for a palette. We had to discuss "I mean to take it up again some day when my children are older and do not need me so much. Just now I am trying to express myself in making an attractive home and bringing up my children properly."

And that is just what she is doing. Without a great deal of money to work with, she is gradually transforming a commonplace house into a wonderfully attractive and artistic home. Everyone who enters it says at once that it looks like her. Without a great deal of time, she is nevertheless managing to give her children an exceptionally fine bringing up. She is painting a picture which she must be very proud to have signed with her name.

The physical aspect of her home, the atmosphere within it, her children's clothes, their health, their manners, their ideals, her husband's happiness—in all these things and others innumerable, a married woman can express herself.

And since her name is indelibly signed to her work, she had best make sure that the work is as good as it is in her to do.

Romance That Is Not Romantic

HE was a tall, athletic, rather good-looking fellow, though to the discerning eye, his face showed traces of weakness and self-indulgence. He drove a public carriage at a mountain resort, and was in great demand among the tourists, because of his picturesque way of telling stories of Western life.

A waitress at one of the hotels of the same resort was his wife, a sad-faced woman, though her countenance still bore traces of a one-time girlish prettiness.

And in the lives of these two, was a "Virginian" romance. For this girl was a school teacher in a little Eastern town, and engaged to one of the most prosperous and respected young men of her native village. Life seemed to be flowing along serenely with the engaged couple, when—enter the cowboy.

He was the son of a good family of the same town, but several years before, had run away from home, and been entirely lost sight of. His father had finally located him, and sent him a pleading letter to return. And like the prodigal, he came back—only in no prodigal spirit. For though he had eaten of husks in the far country, he kept this fact strictly to himself. He told thrilling tales of his life in the West. He dressed in picturesque cowboy fashion, and he became quite the hero of the little town. It wasn't long before the school teacher had broken her engagement to her prosperous but common-place lover, married the stranger, and gone with him to the Western life, he had so glowingly depicted.

And then came hardships such as she had never known. She was earning most of the living as a waitress in a resort hotel.

And thus instead of the pleasant path that life in the beginning had seemed to have for her, she had been led over steep and stony trails where there was nothing but barrenness and hardships.

What had brought about the change?
Some will say it was fate.

But was it not rather, a lack in herself, of appreciation of true values? Through reading books that gave false pictures of life, or perhaps through an education that failed to teach her to know the true, she had altogether a false understanding of what real love is. She had so clothed it with romance, that it had lost all semblance to its true self. And when the youth appeared with his halo of adventure, he corresponded so exactly to the picture of the romantic lover she had made, that being unable to distinguish the false from the true, she was captivated by the glitter, and threw aside the real for the imitation.

But should not a girl's reading and education be such as to give her a true understanding of love—not to rob it of romance, but to give it the romance that lasts?

And should not the school that teaches her this, be the real school-room of girlhood that prepares for life, and whose lessons it rightly learned will make life happy, and not the bitter life-school of experience, in the learning of whose lessons is often only sorrow?

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Mister Man! have you ever thought when you look on a stew for dinner, or hash or croquettes, when you have a taste for porterhouse steak, that your wife would be only too glad to give you the steak (it's much easier to prepare, and she likes steak, too), but she knows you would kick just as hard over the bill for the steak as you do over the brown stew.

The croquette or the stew she can afford. She is doing the best she can as the family economist. Therefore it is up to you to be satisfied and happy, for what she gives you is as nutritious as the steak, and you ought to praise her for the extra work and thought she has put into the meal.

There is nothing more discouraging to those who are limited in their income than to have four or six at table, each with different likes or dislikes.

She Tries to Please.

Does it ever occur to these who come home from business in the evening that wife or mother has tried to do her very best to please each member of the family?

It is impossible to have a different soup, meat, vegetable and dessert for each one, but she is sure to have something that everyone is fond of. Seldom does she think of herself, always of her family, and nothing is too much trouble for those whom she caters to.

But sometimes you forget to give her the praise she deserves, looks for, yes, needs. It means so much to have one say, "This soup is good," or the meat course, vegetable or dessert. One always feels as if she wanted to try twice as hard the next time.

When things have been appreciated, no matter how old we grow, the word of praise is always welcome and cheering.

My personal experience of many years catering to others is that the one who gives the word of praise is the one who is remembered most often; so be sure to earn an extra piece of chocolate cake by keeping sweet at table.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—We are two girls of 11 and 19. One of us has a sister married. Her husband is grouchy and won't say anything to anyone when he has no occasion to act that way. He won't speak to his mother-in-law after she does his washing and all the work. What is the matter with him? (2)—I have small red spots come on my face, but they don't come through the skin. I have been doctoring three weeks, but it doesn't get much better. What can I do? (3)—Will talcum powder injure the skin? (4)—Is it wrong to go to a vaudeville show on Sunday afternoon? (5)—My sister is 18 and weighs 160. Is she too fat? CHIMES.

(1)—He probably is just bad tempered. Mother-in-law should stop doing the washing, etc., and let him pay somebody to do it. (2)—Better keep on doctoring. (3)—No. (4)—It depends upon the show. Some of them are not. Don't go just to amuse yourself, but if you feel that you get real spiritual benefit from the show, there is no harm in it. (5)—She may be tall enough to make the weight in proportion.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—Can you tell me how to make caramel frosting without curdling? (2)—If a girl is corresponding with a young man, should she invite him to come and call, or should she wait until he asks to call? MILLY.

(1)—I think you will find this caramel frosting all right: 1½ cups brown and white sugar mixed, ½ cup sweet cream, butter size of walnut; boil together until thick, then spread between layers.

(2)—You can invite him to call at your home when he comes to town.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you kindly print a recipe for chili con carne? CONSTANT READER.
Chili con carne: 1 lb. round steak chopped fine, 1 quart tomatoes (or 1 can), 1 can kidney beans, 1 pint water, ½ garlic, 2 small onions, ¼ teaspoon red pepper, 4 tbsp. cornstarch; salt to taste. Fry steak in 3 tbsp. lard, until done. Meantime straining tomatoes through sieve, add water, garlic and onions and boil 5 minutes. Then add steak, dissolved in water, red pepper and salt. Boil 15 minutes and serve.

In answer to your other questions. A good doctor will tell you how to treat this.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—What are the legal rates of a pawnbroker in Ohio? (2)—How long a time has an officer to redeem goods? F. J. H.

(1)—The law does not cover this, but usually the rate is the same as the legal rate of a loan company; 10 per cent of the amount loaned and the balance by contract, about 8 per cent. (2)—According to contract.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Kindly give me recipe for a good cold cream for massage. MISS E.

The following is a good massage cold cream which is also a skin food: 4 oz. oil of sweet almonds, 6 drams white wax, 5 drams spermaceti, 2 drams borax, 1½ oz. glycerine, 2 oz. orange flower water, 15 drops oil of neroli, 15 drops oil of bigarade (orange skin) and 15 drops oil of pimento.

Melt first three. Add glycerine to orange flower water and dissolve borax in mixture. Finally, pour the second mixture slowly into the first, stirring all the time.

Orange Puffs.
1 cup flour.
1½ cup sugar.
1 egg.
1 tablespoon melted butter.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
A little orange rind.

Sift flour and baking powder into bowl; add milk, sugar and pinch of salt; beat with egg and butter and orange rind; beat two minutes. Brush cups with a little melted butter, pour in mixture, and bake 20 to 25 minutes in hot oven. Serve with orange sauce.

Grated Sauce.
1 orange grated rind and juice.
2 cups boiling water.
1 tablespoon lemon juice.
2 teaspoons cornstarch.
4 tablespoons sugar.

Put water on in saucepan; add cornstarch wet with a little cold water, and the sugar; boil two minutes and add grated rind and orange and lemon juice.

THE KITCHEN CABINET
WE MUST be as courteous to a man as to a picture which we are willing to give the benefit of a good light.

SOME HOMEY MEAT DISHES.
A nice supper dish may be prepared by pouring a batter over pork sausages and baking them in the oven. Take ordinary link sausages, prick them and put them into a pan and set in the oven to try out a little of the surplus fat; pour off the fat and pour over a Yorkshire pudding batter, as follows: A cup of milk, a pint of flour and two well beaten eggs, a teaspoonful of salt. Bake until the pudding is brown.

Sausages may be baked on top of creamed potatoes, making another nice change from the ordinary method. Serve them on the table in the dish in which they have been baked.

When serving hamburger steak, it may be made to serve several more by the addition of a season cooked oatmeal or other cereal; season well with salt, pepper and onion juice, make in small patties and fry in hot fat. Or, if left in a long roll it may be broiled nicely.

Ham Souffle.—Take a cup of cold cooked ham, one-half cup of cold bread crumbs, three eggs, a pint of milk, and pepper and salt to taste. Beat the eggs light, mix the ingredients thoroughly and bake twenty minutes in a moderately hot oven. Serve with tomato sauce. If served with an escalloped dish, it will not be necessary to have a sauce for the souffle.

Ham is better broiled than fried. Cut in thin slices, soak an hour in lukewarm water to remove the salt. Drain and wipe, then broil five minutes.

Surprise Sausages.—Parboil sausages, divide in half and remove the skins. Wrap in mashed potato, dip in beaten egg and bread crumbs. Fry in deep fat until crisp and brown. Serve these very hot.

Homesick has caused the suspension of infielder Erhart of the Washington American League team. He asked permission to go home the other day, pleading a bad foot as his excuse. When Manager Griffith refused, Erhart packed his grip and beat it. Anyway, Griffith said he had a fair chance to stick with the team, too.

The reform wave threatens to overwhelm baseball. A lot of folk thought that things had about gone the limit when Manager Johnny Evers of the Chicago Cubs prescribed a no-booze clause in the players' contracts. Manager Stovall of the St. Louis Browns ordered that all ball players wear white collars and boiled shirts when in hotels, and Frank Chance forbade the New York Yankees to play poker. Manager McGraw of the New York Giants has tightened things up for his players by promising a fine of $25 for every drink of beer. Somebody'll put the ban on cribbage and coca cola next.

And Death Rate Will Be Lowered.
Statistics prove that the death rate is very much greater in the winter months than in summer, and that the lack of fresh air is largely responsible for this condition.

If the system becomes rundown, blood thin and watery, circulation poor, no appetite, don't dose with drugs, but take our delicious cod liver and iron tonic Vinol, not a patent medicine, as everything in it is named on every package and if it does not give you a hearty appetite, enrich your blood and create strength, we will return your money; that shows our faith in Vinol.

A case has just come to our attention from Albany, N. Y. Mrs. H. Hartman says: "I was in a run-down condition for about five years until this spring, when I learned what a good tonic and strengthener Vinol is. It is certainly the best tonic I have ever used and it has done wonders for me."

RIOT OF COLORS IN AFTERNOON GOWN

The variegated Parisian mode is seen at its most colorful height in this afternoon gown designed by Paquin. It is of dark blue moire, and red and green flowered tulle. The effect is said to be startling but nevertheless exceedingly attractive to those who are in sympathy with the riot of Bulgarian and Oriental colors which has found its way into the season's fashions.

Melt first three. Add glycerine to orange flower water and dissolve borax in mixture. Finally, pour the second mixture slowly into the first, stirring all the time.

Owner Charley Murphy of the Chicago Cubs apparently is taking his chance for sticking in organized baseball quite seriously, in spite of his well-known propensity for talking too much. He has signed a contract which provides that the Cubs shall train in Tampa, Fla., for the next five years. Charley would seem as if he might be the example of Horace Fogel, who talked himself out of baseball last year, and has decided to let money do the speaking.

Ty Cobb, at all appearances is just as happy as if he were sporting himself with the other Detroit players at Gulfport, being a hold-out, he is staying in his native Georgia. He is a ball player who performs for the love of it, he is working out almost every day with the Brooklyn players at Augusta. He got two singles and a stinging double out of four times at bat in a practice game there a few days ago.

The melancholy days have come when the trainer is the most prominent personage connected with a baseball team. It must be trying to the vanity of a previously unassuming young man to become the center of attention upon the official removal of kinks in the training season, at least a ball player's life has little of play and a great deal of work.

One Unconsoled Grief.
Many housekeepers can sympathize with the old Virginia lady who said to her friend, on finding a treasured old cup cracked by a careless maid: "I know of nothing to compare with the affliction of losing a handsome piece of old china." "Surely," said the friend, "it is not so bad as losing one's children." "Yes it is, for when your children die you do have the consolation of religion, you know."

Placing the Blame.

While preparing her three-year-old daughter for bed, her mother on the discovery of a hole in her stocking, exclaimed: "Why, Betty, there is a hole in the toe of your stocking." Betty replied: "Yes mother, but don't blame me, if my big toe ate a piece out of my stocking."

NEW YORK'S "400" CLOSES THE SOCIAL SEASON WITH A MOST GORGEOUS EGYPTIAN FETE, ECLIPSING BRADLEY-MARTIN BALL

Scene at gorgeous Tiffany fete.

What was considered to have eclipsed the famous Bradley-Martin fancy dress ball was given by Mr. Louis C. Tiffany, the famous New Yorker, to more than four hundred of the elect of New York's society. This affair wound up New York's social season just before the beginning of Lent. Every guest wore a costume prevalent in the time of Cleopatra. Some of those who were present were John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Mrs. Rockefeller, C. J. Alexander and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Gilder, and hundreds of others socially prominent.

The photograph shows the scene during the Egyptian pantomime, based on the return of Marc Antony, and welcomed by the famous Cleopatra, in the center of the stage, the famous classic dancer, Miss Ruth St. Denis, is going through the gyrations of one of her dances for the edification of Cleopatra, who, as impersonated by Miss Hedwig Reichler, the actress, is seen reclining on a divan on the left of the picture, watching the dancer. Immediately behind Cleopatra can be seen Marc Antony, as impersonated by Pedro De Cordoba. The ladies-in-waiting on the stage are all socially prominent. Ross leaves can be seen scattered over the floor leading up the stairway to the stage, strewn by the little flower girls in the foreground on the arrival of the queen.

Cause of So Many Necks Being Broke. In a certain Virginia school for negroes the lyceum was debating the question, "Resolved that capital punishment should be abolished." Bill Easley was arguing the affirmative. After an impassioned plea this was his clincher: "And lastly, Mr. President, I hold that capital punishment should be abolished for this reason, namely, that it have been de cause of so many necks being broke."

Antidote for Carbolic Acid. The best antidote for carbolic acid poisoning is flour and water. If nothing better is at hand drink a little plain water to weaken the acid, or still better, drink soap suds if obtainable. If flour is not handy, use magnesia, chalk, soda, lime, whiting or new soap, or knock a piece of plaster from the wall, scrape off the white outside coat of lime, pound it fine, mix with milk or water, and drink at once. Follow with warm water or flaxseed tea. Of course, call a physician at the earliest possible moment.

One Difference. One difference between a good bank teller and a spendthrift is that the teller may earn an honest living by letting money slip through his fingers.

Mistaken View. Strange tricks our vanity will play, and egotistic is life's plan. A fish, which grabbed a hook one day, at first believed he'd caught a man!

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR INDIGESTION, BILIOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION

BETTER THAN CASTOR OIL, CALOMEL OR CATHARTICS TO CLEANSE YOUR STOMACH, LIVER AND 30 FEET OF BOWELS. HARMLESS LAXATIVE FOR MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

Primitive folks did not need laxatives. They lived outdoors, ate plenty of fruit, and all of their food was coarse. We modern people are different. We exercise too little, eat little fruit, and our food is too fine—too rich.

We simply can't have our ten yards of bowels clogged up, liver choked with sour bile and stomach full of foul effete matter and feel well. It means that the food and waste retained in the stomach and thirty feet of bowels ferments—decays. The decay creates poisons, gases and acids, and those poisons are sucked into the blood through the very ducts intended to suck in the nutriment. Then we have sick headache, become dull, bilious, tongue coated, nervous, meals don't digest, and we feel miserable all over. So we must make our choice. We must live like primitive folks, else we must take artificial means to move the excess bile and waste matter on and out of the system.

The safest, most harmless and effective stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator for men, women and children—is delicious Syrup of Figs, which doesn't irritate, gripe or weaken. Its effect is the effect of fruits. It is composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics. Don't think you are drugging yourself. Syrup of Figs can be constantly used without harm.

Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," and see on the label that it is prepared by The California Fig Syrup Company. This is the only genuine—the old reliable. Refuse, with contempt, the so-called Fig Syrup imitations sometimes offered to deceive you.

For Cleansing the Blood

I have never found anything equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. In our home it is regarded our general family medicine. We use it whenever we are bilious or run down, or have impure blood or that tired feeling. I regard it only simple justice to speak well of this medicine, that has proved its worth so many times. Certainly we would not know what to do were we deprived of Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. L. H. Nussbaum, Gosben, Indiana.

"We are living in a grand and wonderful age," remarked a railway passenger to a stranger who occupied the seat beside him. "Invention is rampant everywhere."

"Yes," said his companion, "that's about what I observed to a witness in a lawsuit against me recently; there are more liars to the square yard now than there used to be to the acre."

During one of the aviation meets a young woman went through the hangars under the guidance of a mechanic. After asking all the usual foolish questions that aviators and their assistants have to answer during a tour of inspection, she wanted to know, "But what if your engine stops in the air—what happens?"

"Can't you come down?" "That's exactly the trouble," responded the willing guide. "There are now three men up in the air in France; with their engines stopped. They can't get down and are starving to death."

The Lancashire people are fond of dogs—in fact, very proud of them; and therefore, when a prominent dog fancier came home one night and found his son had bought a nondescript mongrel he was not pleased. "How much didst thee give for that dog?" he inquired. "Five shillings," replied the son. "Tell thee what I'll do," replied the parent. "All I go shares with thee. All give the half a crown for me share." The half-crown was duly paid; then the father remarked: "All tak' tail end, and Am goin' to kick my half outen t' door!" And he did.

The curate of a large and fashionable church was endeavoring to teach the significance of white to a Sunday school class. "Why," said he, "does a bride invariably desire to be clothed in white at her marriage?" As no one answered, he explained: "White, said he, 'stands for joy and the wedding day is the most joyous of a woman's life.' A small boy queried: 'Why do the men all wear black?'" ets are seen on many of the coats. Novelty collars and cuffs give a fashionable air to the utility coat.

Up-to-Date Modes in SPRING ATTIRE

Many of the Spring one-piece gowns resemble a suit in effect. There are various new interpretations of the countless dress, suitable for spring wear. A stunning mustard color cloth has the collar of beaded black silk with over collar and cuffs of lace. The sleeves are designed in one with the waist. A lace frill offsets the front. The coat is knotted over the hips and is joined to the waist under broad leather belt. The skirt is pleated at the sides and back with pleats stitched half way down. Large amber buttons placed next to the hand-worked black silk arrow-heads are used as trimming.

A plaid silk dress in blue and brown has the soft girdle of blue silk knotted directly in front with long ends. This is trimmed with a fine pleated batiste jabot and little gold buckles with brown bows. The skirt has a tunic effect.

A new feature of the dresses are the sleeves of contrasting color and material, or the upper sleeve of one material and the lower of another. One model of green linen has a border of a darker shade of linen. The skirt is made along the usual straight lines and finished with a ruck above the border. The front panel of the darker shade is rounded at the side and is trimmed with crocheted buttons. The waist has the yoke back and front of the darker shade with a narrow frilled vest of lace tucked back. The waist is slightly raised and defined with a black patent leather belt. A collar of the linen is embroidered in black and white is finished with a black tie in front.

LINGERIE DRESSES.

Lingerie dresses are usually made over a foundation of the thinnest China silk, India silk, heavy net or batiste. Colored slips give a pretty effect to an all-white gown. But many are not all white. The majority are made with a combination of materials, and colors are introduced on most of the gowns. Charnisse, or some soft colored silk or chiffon appears at the lower part of the skirt and in the lower part of the waist. The girdle is usually of a color. Some new importations show the eyelid and embroidered voile dresses with the under part and girdle of black silk.

A striking novelty is a white gown with the lower part of skirt and yoke and collar of black net. A girdle of black net has a butterfly bow in back and long ends, which are finished with large white silk dots.

In lingerie gowns the sheer materials dominate. Shadow laces, Valenciennes laces, Venice, Bohemian and Cluny laces are used on the lingerie gowns. Often in combination with open work and eyelet embroidery.

Voiles are shown in combination with many different border effects. Unquestionably crepes, soft finished organdies, batistes, all-over embroidery, and mulls will serve as materials for the new summer gowns.

Most of the sleeves are long, but for comfort's sake the shorter sleeve is sure to be worn in warmer weather.

Plain white net in combination with eyelid embroidery are the materials used over a pink slip for a dainty gown.

The sides of the waist and long sleeves are net. The front and back are of the embroidery, the sleeves are gathered into deep cuffs of the embroidery which are finished with frills of net.

The lower section of the skirt is of the net while the embroidery tunic was of the embroidery reaching below the knees and opening at the left side. A girdle of pompadour silk with sash ends completed the costume.

A cotton crepe has a waist in jumper effect with the jumper, cuffs and fancy low collar finished with gogoting, a touch of handwork which adds an air of distinction to numerous summer gowns. The skirt is tucked around the hips and has a deep insertion of heavy lace around the bottom. The under portion of the waist showing vest and sleeves is of the lace. A Nell Rose velvet ribbon girdle with long ends encircles the waist.

Adore model.
NATURE dresses in all her glory at Springtime, but unlike the feminine sex never changes the patterns of her trees and flowers. A red rose bush year after year will produce a red rose, a maple tree can always be relied upon for exactly the same kind of maple leaf. Womanhood is more fickle and keeps Dame Fashion on the alert each season seeking for new styles in the cut of the garments, new colors, and new fabrics.

Each succeeding season makes a gown of a past season look old-fashioned, so rapidly are the new styles created. Somehow the latest style is always liked the best. We have learned that there really is nothing new under the sun, and what we believe to be new styles are really merely adoptions of old styles. But if it appeals to us as new, that is all that is necessary.

Often fashion follows the line of some period such as the Empire, the Louis XVI, etc., and the war in Balkan States is strongly influencing the designs in women's garments. Of course, we will not adopt freakish Bulgarian eccentricities, but they will be modified so as to conform with American figures and American tastes. Bulgarian colors are used greatly in trimmings and add a brilliant note to the otherwise somber colors.

American fashions for American women is the cry echoed all over, and why not? It is conceded that our tailor-made suits excel all others, and that the American tailors reign supreme. Then why should a foreign label add greater value to a costume when similar creations can be bought here at a great deal less.

Good lines are one of the great essentials of suits or gowns. No matter how costly the material and how elaborate the trimming, if the costume does not fit perfectly and show the figure off to the best advantage, it is a failure. Better to have a few good clothes that give a genuine source of satisfaction, than many different ones. Simplicity in a frock is often a more expert hand to make a really smart frock than a fancy one where the defects can be covered by trimmings.

There is not much difference in the contour of the garments. The slender long lines are still the prevailing style. The skirts are not much wider, and though fullness may be added it is done in such a way as not to puff out, or disguise the figure.

Recipe for Love Letter.

To write a good love letter you ought to begin without knowing what you mean to say and to finish without knowing what you have written.—Rousseau.

A noteworthy feature of the new suits and gowns is the striking combination of two or more colors. Some favored combinations are blue and mauve, taupe and Nell, rose, emerald green and pale rose, violet and geranium rose. Yellow will be used a great deal in the spring gowns.

The leading colors for suits are blues in every shade. Dutch blue, navy blue, Persian blue, and gobein blue will have first representation. Second consideration will be given to the tans, topaz, brown, tobacco, mouse, yellow and champagne. Next will be the magenta, Nell rose, and green shades. Soft tones in gray, dark metal and silver will be popular. All white eponge and serge suits will be worn.

Skirts of large size checks, etc., will be worn with jackets of plain material matching the color of the check. The same idea will be carried out in stripes and plaids. A favorite combination is a blue and white checked skirt with a blue jacket, or a black and white striped skirt with a black or white jacket.

The materials for the suits will be mostly narrow and wide wale Bedford cords, light weight serges, a new etamine which is similar in weave to a Bengaline, novelty worsteds, eponge and some of the manish suitings. Silk suits will be much favored.

The fancy suits will have a fair amount of braids in their construction. Buckles and buttons are seen on all the suits. For a long time buttons were neglected, but now no suit is complete without buttons as a trimming. A pretty touch is given to a suit by the various kinds of odd buttons used, some are bound in direct contrast to the color of the button.

In length the suit coats vary from 24 to 27 inches, or approximately a wrist length for the average figure. Some retain the cut-away effect of the winter; others are cut around the bottom with a decided dip in the back, while again other models are straight across the back and longer at the side seams, practically all are loose fitting with fancy collars, and no separate revers. The coats are cut in sections in the back with the raised waistline, and a slight degree of fullness is drawn in to the belt. Belts of leather or of the same material are seen on a number of suits. A dark blue silk suit has a white suede belt, which gives a stunning effect to the costume.

The latest achievements in suits and dresses show many adoptions of the Russian blouse. This spring the

MILLINERY FANCIES for Spring

Large wings, pheasant's breasts and mercury wings will also be used on the small hats. Loops of grosgrain ribbon either plain or embroidered with flowers, moire ribbon or ribbon with a picot edge, will be used extensively with the stiff loops standing up right, or placed at the back and extending outwards. It will be absolutely necessary for you to get a good rear view of your hat as well as a front view. Don't count any minute wasted that is spent at the mirror when purchasing a hat. Look at it from every angle. You will gain much pleasure in wearing a hat that you know is just right, and remember its good qualities long after you have forgotten the bill.

Hats do not match the suits and gowns, but rather contrast with them. Bright hats are well liked with some of the dull shades of suits now fashionable. Except in red and white, hats of one color are not very popular. The trimming in most cases is in forcible contrast to the hat. The new shades favored for women's head-gear are Neil-Rose, named after Eleanor Wilson, and which promises to be as popular as ever was Alice Blue and Helen Pink. Magenta, purples, soft blues, turquoise blue, browns, grays, new shades of red and yellow. Some striking combinations are brown with deep violet, green with plum blue with scarlet, pink with mauve, and gray with primrose. Of course, black and white is always a good combination. The nasturtium shades and rose shades are much used in combination with other colors. A good-looking hat to wear with a tailored suit is of a green hemp, oval in shape with a high crown. The rolling brim is faced in white straw, a black ribbon with white picot edge encircles the crown. Right in front is a military pompon of black and white.

Another hat is of tan Milan with the brim turned up at the left side, extending out from the left side are wings of Neil-Rose flecked in black. The facing of the hat is of the same shade as the wings.

A blue Balkan turban of hemp is attractively trimmed with a band of velvet about the brim. Under the velvet is a wreath of small red roses. Directly in front is a pompon of plaited ruffles of blue mulline finished at the bottom with a flat bow-knot of the flowers.

Many attractive styles are shown in the millinery hats. As this milline is guaranteed water-proof, these hats are not as perishable as they appear. These hats are mostly draped in short folds of the milline. Frequently two shades are used, one over the other. The narrow brims are shirred. Only loops of folded milline, or aigrettes, are required for trimming.

The larger hats are usually worn later in the summer and are truly picturesque with light dresses. Hand made hats of soft materials are especially new. Chiffon and crepe hats are very stylish.

A graceful pink chiffon hat has a soft draped crown of pink chiffon. The brim is low and drooping of Tuscan straw covered with three circular ruffles of the chiffon. A black velvet ribbon is folded under the crown. A dainty touch is added to the hat by the wreath of small pink and bluish purple flowers placed near the edge of the brim.

It is also predicted that there will be a vogue for lace hats. These are made along the same lines as the crepe and chiffon hats. The effect of these hats is always particularly youthful and simple, and what woman doesn't crave for the appearance of youthfulness?

A gray crepe hat has the crepe shirred on thick cord. The brim slightly rolls at one side and is faced with yellow straw. A fancy band of straw is at the base of the crown. An ostrich fancy of gray is placed at the back.

For the woman who motors, there are many new innovations and little motor caps, which can be adjusted closely to the head. Most of the caps have ties. A motor cap of water-proof silk has a little turned back brim very much on the order of a little "dish-cap." Another has a tan crown, straw brim, with a grosgrain ribbon around the crown finished with a flat tailored bow and gun-metal buckle. Chiffon and raffia motor caps are also shown. Hat pins are not indispensable these days. As some of the hats are so close fitting, it is not necessary to use a hat pin. Hat pins which extend a couple of inches out of the hats are often a source of danger in a crowded place. The most stylish hat pins are those with white or smoked pearl tops and small jeweled hat pins, which are just the proper length for the close fitting hats.

By Eleda Lednem.

THese days a hat is not merely a hat, it is either a "creation," a "stunning affair," or a "masterpiece." Hats are no longer made, they are "built" and original models of the hats we see are designed by those who are really artists in their profession. The value of a hat does not necessarily consist of the materials used, but more often in the skill required in making the hat.

In no other portion of women's wear is her individuality so keenly expressed as in the hat she wears. No two persons can wear the same hat with the same degree of becomingness, but a tilt here or there, a slight change in the position of the trimming will make a vast difference.

The first-of-the-season hats invariably look odd to us, but therein lies their greatest charm. In the millinery world the wheel of fashion revolves so rapidly that many milestones of styles are passed within a short space of time. This Spring another milestone will be passed which will be remarkable for the many new and original features shown in millinery.

It is safe to assert that the Spring hats will be elongated in shape, flaring to the back with hardly any shadow over the face. The hats will be small and close fitting with narrow brims, but what they lack in circumference will be made up in height. The narrow turned up brim is often bent in one, two, three or four points giving a jaunty air to the hat. The rather high crowns are either square or round in shape and there are many suggestions of draped crowns. The Tam-o'-Shanter crowns resemble those of last season, but they are not so close to the brim and considerably higher. Whatever the shape of the hat, the long lines from front to back will predominate.

When deciding the all-interesting question, "What style of hat shall I purchase?" you will not be far from wrong if you decide upon one of the small chic toques, a Tam crown hat with rolling brim, a Balkan shaped turban, one of the new modified hood shapes, a raffia brim sailor, or an English walking hat.

The fashionable straws are Milan, leghorn, chip, tagal, hemp and combination braids.

To trim a hat successfully with as little trimming as possible seems to be an all-important feature of the new Spring millinery. Aigrettes are costly and therefore are never ordinary, so to some extent the aigrette is replacing the winter's feathers on the more expensive hats. The feathers used are fancy in shape. Some have the appearance of "wet feathers," and though rather dejected-looking, are very stylish. Fancy feathers in every shape and form imaginable are used. The trimmings on the hats are placed either directly in front, back or extending out on the side.

Beyond all Hope.

There is hope for the man with unsettled opinions about settled subjects; none for the man with settled

The Millinery of a New Season is Here

What a fascinating procession! Hands across the sea have contributed of their time and talent toward an assemblage of Hats brilliant in their novelty, shapes, trimmings and colors. Into other Hats have been woven the skill of American designers, including that of our own workrooms. Truly a showing of Hats distinctive and Hats beautiful.

COLORS—The Spring Season will be essentially a season of bright colors—whole families of colors. For instance in Blue, there are Saxe Blue, Royal Blue, Old Blue, French Blue and Pastel Blue used in shaded and contrasting effects. What is said of Blues, may also be said of Greens, Browns, Purples, Grays and American Beauty.

SHAPES—A paradox of shapes! Small Hats and yet not small. Hat close fitting at the sides but long from front to back. Yet you must call many of them tiny, "microscopic" say some of the authorities.

TRIMMING—Naturally the trimmings are tiny, too—tiny wings, tiny flowers, tiny rosebuds, skeleton Ostrich, Numidia feathers in all shades and combinations.

After all you really must see the new Hats—merely a glimpse of the loveliness, the originality, the artistic triumph achieved, in the new Easter and Spring Millinery at this shop can be given on this page.

OPENING DISPLAY OF SPRING STYLES

Early Spring Showing of the New Garments and Dress Materials

THE first breath of Spring brings with it the desire to have the new, dainty things that the coming of Spring enables us to offer you. Wonderful assortments have been assembled for this first display, and we invite you to come and enjoy this showing from the foremost fashion centers.

The New Coats

Dame fashion has been unusually capricious in the matter of attire this season—her whims running to more diversified styles than has been her usual habit.

The variations of styles and weaves displayed in our coat section offer an exceptional range for selection. All the new shades in tans and blues including Taupes and checks, shown in staple serges, Whipcords, mistrel cloths, English, Tweed, Eponges, etc., trimmed to satisfy the most fastidious.

Our coat and suit section has more room, more light, more mirrors, more coats, and suits.

The New Silks

Many advantages are secured by early selections from our new and complete assortments of silks. The most favored for this Spring are the soft clingy Crepe Meteors, lustrous Charmeuse, and Brocaded Meteors and Satins. We show a range of ten shades in the new silks, all rich and beautiful colorings.

Bulgarian Silk will be popular for trimmings on all Spring Garments, and we have a comprehensive showing in this new silk.

Spring Suits

Style is the first thing you look for in a suit. Material is the second, workmanship the third, and price the fourth. It is easy enough to get two, or sometimes three, of the above qualifications together, but for all four to be combined in a garment is another matter. The manufacturers of STYLE-CRAFT COATS AND SUITS have successfully mingled all four qualifications.

Our stocks offer you the smart, plain tailored effects in Serges and Cords, so popular this season.

Here and there a dash of Nel-Rose trimmings, Bulgarian pipings and brocaded collars and cuffs are added, making our showing indicative of STYLES THAT ARE BEST

New Dress Materials

For Dresses and Light Weight Suits, we have received many weights and shades in French serges, wool taffetas, and novelty weaves. Especially we mention our 46 inch Epingle cloth, in black, navy, brown, tan and gray shades, priced per yard at $1.50

Silk and Wool Peplin is a desirable light weight material, coming in all the best shades and adapted for use in Spring Dresses.

We mention especially in white cotton materials for dresses, suits and skirts, the new cotton corduroys. We show these in the fine and also wider stripes in qualities up to 50c per yard. Fashion authorities tell us that white corduroys are coming into their biggest season.

Dresses

All Wool French and Storm Serges, Silk and Wool Poplins, Black and White Checked Worsteds, shown in more attractive styles than ever before.

Practical, too, are these dresses for just this time of the Spring season. They fill the demand for something new to wear and yet do not radically change the weight of your outer apparel.

Shown in our stocks in tans, whites, navy, checks, and brown—and priced as cheap as good merchandise can be sold for anywhere.

Laces

These laces in our Spring Showing are rare specimens of fine needlework. Never have we been able to select such beautiful designs and remarkably fine qualities. Included in this first display are Oriental and shadow all overs with laces and insertion bandsto match, Duchess and Shadow Flouncings with bandings in the same pattern, Beautiful Venise, Oriental and Shadow edges and bands.

THE very atmosphere of Spring itself is in these new Spring goods. Many new shades are being shown this season for the first time, new and brilliant trimmings are to be used, and Fashion seems never before to have designed such beautiful colors and rich materials. A we urge you to come and see all of these new things.

SMART SPRING STYLES in FOOTWEAR

BY ELLA LEDNEM.

MANY women have many minds, and though they may have diverse opinions about the style of the shoe, or the material of which it is made, all agree that they desire a comfortable shoe. This season, as never before, the shoes combine the wished for qualities of comfort and durability, with those of style.

Footwear has been brought to such a point that it is not unusual to see crowds gazing at an attractive window display of shoes with as much admiration as is often seen when a work of art is displayed.

"Made in America" shoes are considered to be the best in the world, and American made shoes have a large sale in France, England and Germany.

The tendency of the style seems to be toward conservatism. Not so many novelties will be shown as heretofore. The heels will range from 1/2-inch, which is extremely low, and not adaptable for people with high arches, to the 3/4 or 2-inch heel. The shoes with the low heels will have the rounded box toes, while the higher grade of shoe will have the long vamp and medium narrow toes. A new heel is the Spanish Louis heel, which is a happy medium between the French and Cuban heel.

The high button boots for early spring will have fourteen buttons. Very few lace boots will be worn. Patent leather is always good for every occasion. The dull kind and tan shoes will be greatly favored. Grey shoes in slate kid and suede will prevail as a novelty of the season.

There is always a demand for Oxfords with the advent of warm weather. Button Oxfords will be the style. Some of the Oxfords will have the buck counters of Parisian gray cloth and the front of patent leather, or dull kid.

to harmonize with a tan gown, the buck counters are of tan. Nobby Oxfords are featured of black or dull kid with white tops.

High white shoes in nubuck and canvas, also white Colonial and plain pumps, are shown in a great variety of styles. The pumps are gayly decorated with buckles. Buckles for street wear are of sterling silver. Cut steel, fancy metal and enamel white buckles in imitation ivory are worn on white pumps. For evening wear there are jeweled buckles galore, and even the heels of the slippers are jeweled. Slippers of satin to match the gown have an edge of brilliants around the top.

A fancy dancing slipper had an over layer of lace with the satin, green glimmering through, to harmonize with the color worn.

Randolph slippers are fascinating affairs of dainty colored ribbons, shirred to quilted sole and festooned with tiny rosebuds.

HOSIERY.

Silk stockings are no longer considered a luxury, but rather regarded as a necessity. Those with lisle tops and soles are found to be the most practical. A clever woman will purchase her stockings a size larger than necessary and will find they will give better service.

Many stockings are shown in vivid colors to match the slippers or to be worn with black pumps. A new idea in hosiery is the accordion pleated ribbed hose. This is ribbed in black and white, or black with any contrasting shades.

Open work stockings are in popularity with embroidered stockings. The black stockings have black clocks in the instep and the white are embroidered with similarly white clocks, much as was the fashion of older times.

Lace insertions and medallions are inserted by hand in silk stockings. If one is left with the needle many odd moments can be used to advantage in embroidering stockings.

An oddity shown at an exclusive shop was a net stocking of silk cord that produced a mermaid effect when worn over a plain silk stocking of contrasting color.

New Modes for Misses & Children

PERHAPS little sister is far more clever than her big sister when it comes to selecting her wardrobe. For often season after season juvenile apparel does not vary in style. At any rate not to such a great extent as it does for the grown-ups.

When a certain style has been found both practical and becoming, there is no hesitation about adopting it again with a few modifications. Special attention is given to the signing of youthful attire, so as to make the best of what are not always graceful lines.

It is no longer necessary to imitate mother's gown for little daughter, as a great variety of styles are originated with careful thought for juniors and little tots. The waist line is always a noticeable feature in children's dresses as the normal waist line is not becoming to the average child. This year the new coats and frocks are identified by the very long waist, which extends nearly to the knees and the broad Russian belts which cross the back or encircle the waist.

Another new feature is the combining of two contrasting colors. A smart touch is added by having the collars, cuffs and belts of a characteristic contrast to the rest of the garment.

There is a strong indication for light weight serges. Possibly no coat answers as many purposes as a navy blue serge with detachable pique collars and cuffs.

Other materials much used are Bedford cords in all shades of red, and tan, also sponge, and novel effects in good size checks, stripes and fancy mixtures with plain color collars, cuffs and belts.

The coats are box and Norfolk in shape, with belts of red or black patent leather, white kid, or of the same material as the coat piped in a contrasting shade with fancy buckles.

Norfolk styles are shown in dresses with kilted skirts. A cunning Norfolk middie dress had the skirt of black and white check, while the Norfolk was of red. The novelty collar was of the checked material rounded at the neck. The sleeves were three quarters length, set in well below the shoulder. The same idea can be carried out with a khaki color skirt and a tan and white striped Norfolk jacket.

Skirts with panel back and front, skirts with kick pleats, skirts with tucks around the waist to form the fullness, kilted and box pleated skirts are the most popular styles for girls. It is safe to predict that the pleated skirt is the thing assured for youthful modes.

For play dresses gingham in pretty checks, and plaids, piques, valances, chambrays, and repps, as usual have the call. Little touches of style are introduced in the shape of yokes, surplises, panels, fancy collars, etc., of a different material.

Nothing is more charming than simplicity of cut and trimming in children's dresses.

The Russian blouse effects are very adaptable for young girls. The tailor suits for the young misses have a slightly raised waist line and are cut along the straight line effect. The coats average 24 inches in length and the skirts are about 2-3 yards in width. A preference is given to a two piece skirt with panel back and front, and invisible pleats on the sides.

The new "Johnnie" coats which are loose and three-quarters in length, are exceptionally becoming to youthful figures. The fronts are rounded and most of these coats have fancy collars and cuffs and large buttons.

There are many adorable styles in party dresses. One clever little model was a white voile over blue silk. The waist was embroidered in raised roses and punch work. Tiny tucks formed the yoke back and front. The elbow sleeves were set in below the shoulders. The extremely low waist had a wide soft girdle of ribbon, which came only to each side of the panel in front and was finished with fluffy ribbon rosettes. The skirt was finished with a jaunty bow with long ends. The skirt was pleated with fine pleats which gave the effect of accordion pleating, and above the wide hem were three one inch tucks.

A quaint little dress was of pink crepe cut in one piece with kimona sleeves and fell straight from the shoulders to the knees where it was shirred into a wide hem. The deep pointed collar and cuffs were of hand embroidered batiste edged with small pleatings of fine net.

Soft effects in hats are best for little girls. The shape is most important as only the simplest trimmings are used. A mushroom shape, hat forms a pretty frame for a young face. Also poke bonnets in a modified form and Tam-o-Shanter crown hats trimmed with ribbon and small flowers are the most sought for in juvenile millinery.

A charming little hat was of white hemp in poke bonnet effect with a ruffling of Nell rose ribbon with a picot edge around the rather high crown. In the center of large pleated rosette of the ribbon was a bouquet of moss roses placed on the left side.

The hats with Tam-o-Shanter crowns have soft frills of lace or ribbon for the brim drooping over the face. A rough black straw Tam-o-Shanter crown had accordion pleated ruffles of pale blue ribbon with a narrow black velvet edge, a flat tailored box of ribbon was placed directly in front. At the back and sides were the prettiest little bunches of old fashioned flowers.

For daughter's best hat why not have one with a straw crown of any pretty shade and the drooping brim of pleated valenciennes lace with small flowers placed gracefully at intervals. In front have a medium high stick-up formed of the flowers.

The Last Word about Lingerie

By ELLA LEXMAN.

DAININESS is one of the most valued qualities in lingerie. Certainly it is fully emphasized in the new season. The snowy white fabrics with laces and irresistible ribbon bows tucked here and there are sure to delight the heart of every woman. One cannot be smartly dressed unless her lingerie is cut along the present form fitting lines.

In the less expensive gowns and combinations it is far better to have good material and less lace, or embroidery, though it is truly wonderful what charming undergarments can be purchased for less than a dollar.

In the more valuable garments such remarkable values are shown that it hardly pays to make undergarments at home.

If one is partial to hand embroidery, plainer garments can be bought and embroidered by hand during spare moments. Many new creations have been evolved from the combination of cover and drawers of former seasons. The newest ones are of sheer nainsook, or batiste, and are embellished with a wide variety of lace, such as filet, Bohemian, French and German valenciennes, shadow and linen-cluny laces. Crepe de chine, China silk and silk batiste are used in the more expensive garments.

An original fancy is to have a delicate color note in the gowns, skirts and combinations. Voile or batiste is tucked in the shape of medallions, or a pleated ruffle of the same material as the skirt in blue or pink is a pronounced feature of the new petticoats. Often panels of sheer colored materials are introduced.

The knicker drawer combinations have ribbons running through the necks, the sleeves and drawers tight at the knees. One combination was trimmed with Van Dyke pointed valenciennes lace. The seams were joined with a tiny hemstitched insertion.

Another was made on the straight lines like a princess slip with a circular ruffle, joined below the hips, forming the short petticoat and drawers. Around the top and in the lower ruffles was a pretty design of Roman embroidery. The edges were scalloped and run through with wash ribbon. The top was so shaped that the shoulder straps could be tucked in when an evening gown was worn.

Most attractive slip-over gowns are of crepe de chine adorned with shadow laces and fine tucks. These gaudy beautifully.

Very dainty affairs are the gowns with the upper part of the gown and the sleeves formed entirely of lace joined with embroidered bands. A broad ribbon beading encircles the empire waist; tiny ribbon rosebuds adorn the gown. There is a great profusion of ribbon on all the undergarments.

In another gown the yoke was formed of fine tucked pink batiste with the sleeves of fluted lace net. These were joined to the yoke with ribbon beading.

The new petticoats are cut along the same close fitting lines as heretofore. Crepe de chine skirts with silk jersey top are well liked for wear with tailored suits. Most of the undershirts are made without an underlay, or if a flat underlay is desired, it is of course net. A plain band of lace is a suitable finish, or flat plaited ruffle. Wash voile is a satisfactory material used in skirts. A white wash voile skirt which drew forth expressions of admiration had a plaited ruffle of colored mull; over this was a deep ruffle of eyelet embroidery finished with a pink scalloped edge.

An effective flounce on a petticoat has the top finished with imitation Venetian lace; the points of the lace hang over the flounce. A tiny pink ribbon rosebud is placed at each point, the bottom of the skirt is finished with a wide insertion about two inches above the broad hem.

DRESSING SACSQUES.

It is a matter of personal choice what material is to be used for a dressing sacque, but alluring dressing sacsques are shown in sheer white nainsooks, crepe, mull, and dotted batiste often made over an undressable pink or blue silk slip. These have raised flowers, Roman work, or eyelet embroidery with laces artistically inserted. The sleeves are loose flowing set in below the shoulder.

Thoughtful.

Aunt (with her two nieces at a concert)—Oh, but this is tedious! Let me take your fan, Ida, so I can hide my yawning behind it! Olga—Take mine, auntie! It's bigger!—Elegante Bluetter.

One of the latest creations had the back and front embroidered in shell pink roses. The edge was scalloped in the shape of a rose leaf. The empire effect was produced by a wide band of ribbon run through slashes of the material. The sleeves were laced together with twisted ribbon.

Nearly as much thought is given to planning a negligee as to some of the handsomest gowns. In fact they are so closely modeled along the same lines, that often there is but a small line of demarcation between the street and house gowns.

There are numerous negligees which combine the comfort of a loose gown with the elegance of dinner dress. Under the heading of negligees comes the elaborate one for the hostess to receive her afternoon callers, one for the rest room, and one for the breakfast table and in a class by itself the ever comfortable kimono.

A novel negligee was of accordion plaited pinks and lavender crepe de chine, the skirt at the hem was turned up with a fancy hemstitched insertion. The Robespierre collar cut low in front was of lavender satin, as was the girde around the empire waist. This girde was of braided folds of the satin knotted in front with long ends. In the back was a shawl effect of lavender chiffon and cream shadow lace, which reached below the waist and formed a drape over the short sleeves.

The bodice caps match the negligees in color and material. They have a low dropping frill of lace at the back with a band of ribbon around the front closely resembling the Dutch caps. Fluffy rosettes of ribbon are placed at each side of the band.

CORSETS

The new corsets in accordance with the present styles with the very low busts and extremely long hips are like the former corsets with the high bust and low hips, only upside down.

More pliancy is noted in the new models. Cotton and silk tricot is used in the manufacture of many of the corsets. Don't pride yourself on a small waist measurement. The corsets are made so that the appearance of the waist is large. The corsets continue to have the straight line effect and extremely long skirt. There is less boning or softer boning so that one can conform to Fashion's dictation and also wear a easy fitting corset.

Brassieres are now recognized as a dress necessity with the low busted corsets. Brassieres trimmed with lace or embroidery are a substitute for both the corset cover and brassiere. For stout persons more boning is necessary but some new brassieres are made of some heavy fabrics that few bones are used. All-over embroidery brassieres lined in net are very desirable. Both back and front buttoning varieties are worn. Other brassieres are of coarse white net with washable shields attached.

From a Paris Letter

used to write to you a description of the way French ladies of fashion are dressing their hair this spring, it seemed an easy task. But really I have seen so many different head dresses and strange to say all becoming, that it is hard to describe any particular coiffure as "the style."

French ladies may have ears, but I haven't seen any. They are so completely covered with soft uncarved tresses. The wavy locks are brought out to a line with the eyebrows, while in front the hair is drawn away down over the forehead, sometimes a delicate fringe, which you might call "a bang," is worn.

The new styles are really copied from the head dresses worn by beauties centuries ago. Suggestions are taken from old pictures by famous artists. Simplicity is the keynote, and all praise and glory, no longer is it necessary to wear false hair. One can easily arrange an attractive coiffure with one's own supply. If a switch is worn, it is interlaced in the hair so as not to be noticeable. Only light weight switches about 30 inches long are used.

Fortunately for you, your hair has a natural wave, because large loose waves with no special depth, but rather forming a perfect scallop well drawn over the face, is one of the latest coiffures. For evening wear I have noticed a profusion of little curls nesting against the neck.

The close head dress resembles the Victorian period. The hair fits the head like a cap and always the contour of the head is observed. I'd suggest you dress your hair in back with a bonnet effect. I can describe it better by saying "up and out" in a psychic effect. With this style the hair is parted in front or directly on one side, then drawn together so that the part is not noticeable. A new revival of the pompadour is worn in a flat pompadour pushed toward the face with a comb. The coronet braid is worn around the head, resembling a thick cable cord, and is held in place with fancy pins.

Combs, loop pins and barrettes are worn to a marked degree. Some pretty pins are shown in platinum, finished aluminum set with rhinestones. Amber pins are good looking in blonde hair, while tortoise shell is preferred for brunettes.

The simplicity of evening coiffures necessitates a head dress or ornament of some kind, for social functions and theatre wear. The hair band worn in the Greek style should harmonize with the gown. A single band of rhinestones is very effective. Tulle with an aigrette of spun glass or iridescent beads and spangles in the shape of butterflies and bowknots are stunning when they glisten in the light.

I forgot to mention that some ultra smart women powder their hair with a perfumed rice powder and wear a patch on the cheek to accentuate the brilliancy of the eye. Of course this head dress is only for evening wear and is simply a fad.

Hoping these suggestions will be of service to you when next you attempt to dress your "crown of glory," I am, Yours very truly,

CATHERINE.

Skirts and Blouses

No wonder that the separate skirt to be worn with odd waists is again in popular favor. The woman who possesses two skirts to every suit and two waists to every skirt can be remarkably well dressed on a limited income.

An odd skirt of light weight serge, Bedford cord or any of new Spring materials, can be used with different waists, thus making a change in the appearance. Though skirts of plain material have formerly been considered the most suitable for wear, with odd waists, the season checks, stripes and novelty mixtures are employed on the smart skirts.

The narrow appearing skirts emphasizing the slender hip line are very modish. Many novel effects in slight drapings and pleats of various kinds are introduced. The pleats which give greater freedom in walking, are either pressed flat, or tacked down and flare only at the bottom of the skirt.

Models with panels both back and front, or side pleated panels with the pleats stitched half way down, are much seen.

In length the skirts barely clear the ground and demurely cover the ankles. About two inches above the ground is a good length. Though many will cling to the shorter skirt as more convenient for every day wear, the new skirts have various suggestions of yokes. The waist line is either normal or slightly raised, wide belts, or soft crushed girdles are often added.

Buttons are used lavishly on the skirts in square, oblong, oval or ball shapes. Self buttons, ivory buttons, bone buttons, and all sorts of fancy buttons are used. A natty skirt had two rows of ball buttons all the way down the left side of the skirt joined with loops of the material.

Another skirt has a row of buttons on each of the kick pleats back and front. Simplicity, but often elegant simplicity, is a striking characteristic of the new blouses.

The new waists are fuller back and front than those of previous seasons, and truly "blousy," often giving a negligee appearance. The loose effects are especially comfortable for warm weather. Another cause for rejoicing is that most of the waists button in front so that one need not depend upon others to "button them up."

Crepe waists of all kinds hold full sway. Then there are waists of all over lace nets, chiffon, nets, voiles, and charmeuse for dress. The dainty lingerie waists of voile, batiste, and crepe in plain and fancy effects, are nearly all trimmed with a contrasting color, which is introduced either in the hand embroidery, or in the collar and cuffs and small vests. Ratine and colored picot edge voiles are used on white waists to a marked degree.

The new waists are identified by the square yoke back and front. The little fancy vests, the low set in sleeves, the extra fullness back and front, and the full length or three-quarter sleeves with deep cuffs. Black silk collars and cuffs are used on the white waists. These, of course, are made detachable. Crochet crystal round or oblong, pearl buttons in white and colors and amber buttons are shown on the latest models with the button holes worked in contrasting colors.

The strictly tailored shirts in tub silk, silk and cotton crepes, charmeuse, pique madras and linen are severely plain in cut. Long sleeves are the rule in these tailored modes. If the material is striped, the collar, cuffs and small jacket match the stripe. Some of the models have the tucked fronts, either in small pin tucks or alternating narrow and wide tucks, simulating a man's shirt front.

On dresses and waists fancy collars of colored hand embroidery, of lace over colored voile, of chiffon, or of silk are universally becoming except to very stout persons. The Medici collar is taking the place in some instances of the Robespierre collar, and is shown in a new form.

A stunning model of all-over lace is made over flesh-colored net. It has a square yoke back and front with the body of the waist shirred to the yoke, and is quite full and blousy at the waist line. The coral satin Robespierre collar, cuffs, and vestee are embroidered in a darker shade of coral and have rows of rhinestone buttons set in pink cuffs for trimming. A jabot of net is on each side of the front, and the same net is used as frills on the long set-in sleeves.

The very popular Bulgarian embroideries are seen in the new Spring blouses. A white voile waist has the collar embroidered in Bulgarian collar. Charming in their simplicity are the blouses of jolly crepe with Dutch collar, turn back cuffs and the small breast pocket of Swiss embroidery with dainty lace. Laces are used a great deal on all this year's blouses in insertions in fanciful form, lace collars, vestees and cuffs. Some of the new lingerie waists are composed nearly entirely of hand run tucks and lace with frilly jabots of the face sometimes finished with a narrow hemstitched border of colored voile.

Three Stores—Clothing, Shoes, Furnishings—On The Bridge

By Peggy Powers.

THE pearl ranks first as the fashionable stone of the hour. Possibly because it is by far the most expensive of all precious gems. Pearls are more valuable than diamonds, next in value comes the glowing ruby. Women who hesitate to wear imitation jewels, wear necklaces of pearls which so closely resemble the genuine that it is difficult for any but an expert to determine whether they are a substitute for the real or not.

Sapphires also are very popular, especially when set with diamonds in the French caliber setting.

The call for color has brought the olive in favor. The color is beautiful, and it is often preferred to the emerald as it is softer in tone. Olive as a central stone surrounded with fine diamond work is especially liked for a new ring or pendant.

It is hardly necessary to remark that nothing in the way of elaborate jewelry is adaptable for morning wear when a woman is gown in a tailored suit or shirt waist dress. However, a circular brooch of gold or enamel, at the neck to hold the collar in place is always appropriate. If a watch is worn, a snout of ribbon with gold or platinum slides is permissible. Earrings should be of the stud type, either of pearls or baroque pearls.

In the whole realm of jewelry, the pearl necklace is the only one in good taste for morning, afternoon and evening wear. Sometimes the pearls are worn under the flay lace collar and just glimmer through the net. Bar pins are shown in chased gold or filigree set with pearls, or whole bar pins of seed pearls. Old fashioned lockets are very popular. Some of the prettiest are enameled in dainty designs or silver. One locket of dark blue enamel had a pretty wreath design in natural colored flowers. This hung from a blue enamel chain with silver links. The neck chains are from 16 to 18 inches in length. The round gold head chains have been superseded by gold chains with pear shaped gold pendants graduated in size.

Vanity cases are shown in a variety of designs from the inexpensive one in Parisian ivory to the more elaborate affairs in gold and silver. As it is such a convenient contrivance, it is safe to predict its continued popularity. Fine silver mesh bags are attached to the plain silver bracelet. The bracelet does not need to be removed when the bag is opened. Bracelets serve many purposes, these bags and are useful as well as ornamental. There are a harvest of new ideas in the flexible watch bracelets. Of the plainest gun metal to the most elaborate bracelet of platinum set in diamonds are bracelets with tiny watches. Some are enameled, others of sterling silver, some of gold and some of ribbon with jeweled slides. Some bracelets have powder puffs attached, while others have small purses.

There is a revival of the old-fashioned reticelle, which was carried by ladies of fashion nearly a century ago. Then the bags were headed by hand and an exclusive design was highly prized. Most of the bags are headed by machinery, but so wonderfully is the work accomplished that these bags are really exquisite. Most of the leather bags are envelope in shape and have flexible tops.

A new idea shown in the finger ring pin. This fastens with a patent clasp, and is far more desirable than the ordinary small bar pins. Cameos are exquisite and are more popular than ever. Fortunate is the person who possesses an heirloom in the shape of a cameo set in an old fashioned old setting.

The Latest in Eye and Glasses and Chains

We have just received direct from the factory a shipment of the newest Atlas Shur-on Eye Glasses. These Eye Glasses do not detract from appearance but in many cases they improve. Modern Eye Glasses, as we furnish them, are rimless lenses held surely but comfortably on the nose by the inconspicuous Atlas Shur-on mountings. We can put your old lenses into a new Atlas Shur-on in a few minutes.

We have a large stock, the latest and best Eye Glass Chains and Lorgnette Chains. The Lorgnette chains are 48 inches long and can be used for a lorgnette, watch, coin purse, vanity or fan. The prices of the chains are 75 cents and up.

By ANNE MENDEL.

HERE is no word in the English language that conveys more to us and appeals more to our sentimental emotions than the word "home". Whether it is a home luxuriously furnished, or one furnished in the simplest fashion, still it is home. A home that is surrounded by an atmosphere of cheer, refinement, hospitality and comfort is the ideal home.

Different generations of Americans have passed through different phases of home furnishings, but this generation more than any other has learnt to appreciate the true value of home-making from every viewpoint. As never before careful consideration and study has been given to the beautifying of homes. A sense of fitness certainly must always be a governing point in the selection of furniture, but a knowledge of various periods of furniture is most beneficial.

In connection with the study of furniture you become acquainted with the history of various countries, the different characteristics of nations, the value of woods and fabrics and the influences that have been potent in the designing of different periods of furniture.

There is a strong wave of sentimentality at present for the antique in furniture. As there is not much antique furniture of real value which has not been already discovered by dealers and lovers of "the old," it is better to purchase a good reproduction of an old piece than an old piece whose claim to intrinsic value is its age.

One good outcome of this craze for antiques is that we have learned to judge the merits of antiques and have stopped long enough to ponder that the showiest article isn't always the best. It has also inspired us with the desire to seek the better class of furniture, to buy more substantial pieces, so that the furniture we purchase today may serve as heirlooms to our progenitors.

"Simplicity in ornament is high art." Rather a few good pieces than an over-loaded place. We have survived the days of tawdry bric-a-brac, elaborate parlor curtains and useless pieces of furniture, so that the room presents a far more cultured appearance than formerly. Nor do we incline to the crazy quilt effect with each piece upholstered differently, regardless of every other piece, but we prefer to use a decorative scheme so that the whole effect will be one of harmonious blending of colors.

The walls are usually neutral in color with the rugs in harmony. The color note is brought out in the draperies, and upholstering. We also have escaped the monotonous one color scheme where one shade, or different tones of one color was used as far as expedient to the elimination of every other color.

Mission furniture served a good purpose when it brought us back to a love for the simplicity in outline. When a piece of furniture of former elegance has outlived its usefulness, do not hesitate to discard it. A simple piece of furniture is far more suitable in any room than an elaborate piece which "has seen its best days."

The law of restraint is a good law to follow in furnishing a room. Do not buy too many pieces, and buy an article only in relation to other things you already possess. There is some wisdom in asking yourself the following questions when purchasing furniture: "Will it fit in with the other furnishings?" "Why do I wish this particular piece?" "Is it honest furniture, true in outline, design and construction?" After you have answered these questions satisfactorily you need not hesitate about purchasing the article.

Rapid transit has had a great influence on the furnishings of the home. There are so many radiating centers from which one can purchase good furniture that even the far-distant homes are furnished in the most up-to-date style.

As an English exterior is greatly favored in domestic architecture so the interiors are mostly along the lines of the old English periods. Colonial houses of course have Colonial interiors and Colonial furnishings. Bungalows stand in a class by themselves but for a simple home a bungalow is a joy forever. Instead of the oft repeated phrase "love in a cottage" we hear the expression, "love in a bungalow."

What is known as the arts and crafts furniture is especially suitable for use in the bungalow. There is a great preference shown in English style houses for reproductions of the Jacobean period. Oak and mahogany furniture with cane insets are greatly used. This style originated in the Orient, but was taken up by the French designers of Louis XIV, XV and XVI periods, and still later by the English. Nearly all the designs in Adams furniture have some style of cane in the construction.

With the knowledge that "too much fresh air is just enough," we have come to consider the sleeping and living porches as essential to the well built house. The larger porches are now constructed so that they can be used as living rooms, or sun parlors in the winter. Every spring there are welcome additions to the already large assortment of wicker, natural willow, or stained willow, fern, Chinese sea grass and painted porch furniture. A large grass rug or art square usually serves as the floor covering. Gay colored chintzes, or cretonne cushions make the chairs look all the more inviting. Wheel carts, lamps, serving tables, magazine stands, screens, porch shades and swinging couches are all made along lines which make them peculiarly adaptable for porch use.

A novelty in furniture for the veranda comes in black and white wood, which has sort of a shadowy effect. The cretonnes with black back grounds and gay splashes of old fashioned flowers look extremely well on these chairs.

The living room should be what the name really infers, a livable room. It should be as spacious as possible so as to be a center for all the home enjoyment. An inviting, restful air should prevail. Careful attention should be given that the day light is not obscured by heavy curtains and that the artificial illumination is such that the room is well lighted for reading and writing. A fire-place flanked with book-cases is one of the most decorative parts of the room. Don't hide the fire-place with a screen in summer, but rather bank the hearth with flowers and plants. Flowers are in place anywhere and every where.

Reproduction in all the old English period furniture is used in furnishing the living room, and there are many new small necessary pieces of furniture offered which exactly match the larger pieces and serve a distinct purpose in the living room, such as waste baskets, ash receiver stands, carts, flower stands, working table, book stands, magazine racks and foot rests.

Hang the curtains as near the window shades as possible, and a little above the sills. Curtaining every window in the house with the same simple curtain material, is a wise plan to follow. For the casement windows there is a special kind of casement cloth curtaining which is made to hang on rings, and takes the place of window shades. Panels of net with insertion are often used instead of the former full curtains and in many cases the sheer curtain is dispensed with and soft silks, cretonnes, chintzes, taffetas, new French warp, printed linen and sun proof materials are used which hang straight from the pole. A house which was recently furnished had curtains throughout the house of French linen with a valvety effect printed in a glorious floral design and lined with white satin. In winter the heavy velvets and tapestries are preferable, but in spring and summer we prefer the cool looking cretonne and chintze coverings for the furniture to match the hangings. These materials come in designs which harmonize very well with the old period furniture.

DINING ROOM.

The primary equipment for a room where the family assemble for meals should be a quiet cheerful setting. Yellow, tan, old gold or blue tones are the best for this room. The choice of furniture is governed largely by the wood work of the room. Mahogany and oak in different finishes are usually chosen for the dining room. For a Colonial style room Mahogany is invariably the wood preferred. For rooms with heavy oak wood work furniture of a severe type is demanded, or if the woodwork has a rich dark finish, then Flemish oak is used. Sheraton and Jacobean reproductions of furniture are used in the dining rooms. Chinese decorative schemes are very attractive for the dining room. One room was effectively furnished in Chippendale furniture. The hangings were of a blue and gold Chinese Chippendale pattern. The rug was of Chinese design, though of domestic manufacture with blue and gold colors predominating. Quaint china in Chinese designs was selected for this room. The center of the table had an embroidered linen square with the design brought out in the colors which predominated in the hangings and the rug. The window curtains were of old gold soft silk.

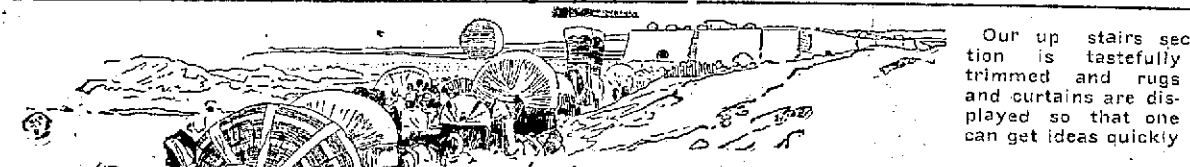

THE BED ROOMS.

Chintzes, and heavy effects should be avoided. We should try to make our bed rooms as light and airy as possible. We still cling to the Colonial, or French and English periods in furnishing our bed rooms. Designs in Sheraton, Adams, Chippendale and Circassian walnut are all suitable for bedrooms. Enamel furniture in white ivory or colors with cane insets is possibly more favored than any other for bed rooms. There is something so attractive about enameled furniture that it will be long before its popularity begins to wane. One room furnished in ivory enamel and cane furniture had the walls of a pretty striped paper with a rose color border and the wood work of white enamel. The rug was a hand tufted one in shades of rose. The windows were covered with a dainty net curtain, and the side panels and valance over the curtains were of a wonderful flowered chintz in rose and blue coloring on a white background lined in rose color. The wide built in couch was piled with rose colored and chintz cushions. The bed cover and the cushions on the enameled chairs were of the same material as the draperies. In this room was a millinery stand of ivory enamel with chintz covered boxes, a sewing table, a waist box, a shoe box, and a sewing table designed in the same manner, a bureau, a wonderfully convenient dressing table which held all the toilet articles and when closed resembled a cabinet, a chiffonier and a desk completed the set.

Birdseye maple also is desirable for bed room furniture. Birdseye maple needs a certain degree of brightness to set off the beauty of the wood. Deep blue as a predominating color is the best background for the draperies. No degree of yellow or pink will give as friendly an atmosphere to the room furnished in maple as blue.

In bedrooms, with little expense, personal thought, and artistic taste, very good effects can be obtained. A summer bedroom hung simply with red and white checked gingham and furniture painted white, an inexpensive grass rug and wall pocket cases for fresh flowers were really effective in its charming simplicity.

Our up stairs section is tastefully trimmed and rugs and curtains are displayed so that one can get ideas quickly

New Offerings in Tableware

THE history of chinaware and its development is interesting. Instead of seeking new patterns, we are continually going back to the old designs for present-day inspirations. Innumerable new examples of exquisite china which really are reproductions of old pieces, are brought out to delight the eye of the woman who prides herself on her home and its furnishings.

Although some hostesses prefer to have each course served in a different service, it is now thought more advisable to have the dinner set of one pattern throughout, with the exception of the service plates. When purchasing a dinner service, buy from an open stock pattern if possible, so that there will always be an opportunity to replace breakage with new pieces.

One can give their fancies full sway when it comes to choosing tableware. For there is every kind for every purpose. White and gold plates with either heavy borders, narrow trimmings, or simple designs are always in good taste. With this china goblets can be bought which closely match the gilt design.

Service plates covered in all-over gold having a low standard which raises the plate slightly above the table, are the latest contribution to the table.

As in other decorative schemes, the Oriental note is very strong. Decided partiality is shown for pronounced colors and characteristic effects, instead of delicate tones. The ornamentation consists chiefly of birds, flowers and fruits in designs copied from the Old English patterns.

Chinese designs in great varieties are wonderfully popular. Considerable attention is given to china suitable for use in summer homes. These sets are usually simple in design and come in quaint old patterns. An attractive set is in Holland ware. These in odd Dutch shapes with little ornamentation are used a great deal at present.

Many recent offerings in china render double service. There is increasing demand for a china hors d'oeuvre dish in which to serve little relishes. A teapot, creamer and sugar bowl combined, which occupies no more space than the ordinary teapot, is a new conception in china ware.

The new vegetable dishes are divided in two parts so that two kinds of vegetables can be served from the same dish.

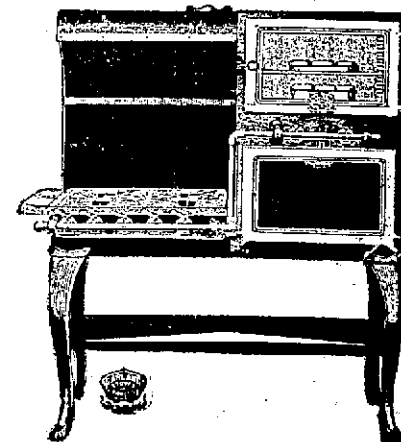

For the tea table there are charming tea sets, some in Colonial design, which are particularly lovely.

Very beautiful are the Rock Crystal pieces set in silver. A centerpiece for the table is formed of a rock crystal flower vase joined to four smaller vases by means of glass chains.

A breakfast set of white porcelain decorated with a border of green and gold includes ten individual pieces that just fit on a papier mache tray

Labor Saving Devices for the Household

By ROSALIE G. MENDEL.

THERE are numerous labor saving devices on the market which the wise housewife will find both time and labor saving. If "time is money" then it is a wise idea to invest some money to economize on time. Most of the up-to-date household contrivances are invented by women and some quite accidentally as "necessity is the mother of invention."

There is no danger of the water over-boiling when one uses a whistling kettle. Directly the water boils the whistle sounds a warning to the cook. Likewise is an egg boiler which whistles when the eggs are cooked lightly, whistles when the albumen is thoroughly set, whistles consecutively for one minute when the eggs are hard boiled.

Instead of the ordinary wash board, there is a new help for the laundress—the board has a smooth surface and a covered roller of corrugated metal is rubbed over it.

An electric grille for the breakfast table tends to make the preparing of breakfast a simple matter.

Cereal sets come in decorated china, 12 pieces filled in a shelf so as to take up very little space. Of course, each jar is labeled as to its contents.

Nearly every cooking utensil comes in aluminum. These articles are easy to keep clean, and their lightness and durability makes them popular.

A folding omelet pan of aluminum assures one of a carefully turned omelet.

There is also a set of cooking kettles which fit together so that these can be used at one time over one gas burner.

A vacuum hand washer which only costs 75 cents washes the clothes by suction, and if one cannot afford a washing machine, it is the next best thing.

A knife sharpener which will find a ready welcome in the household has two emery wheels adjusted with a slot into which the blade slips. To sharpen the knife it has only to be run through each slot a couple of times.

Trays come in white, blue and pink. The white trays are easily kept clean and are especially useful for the sick room.

There is no end to the vacuum cleaners on the market. One is small and light in weight, weighing only nine pounds, removes the dirt in a satisfactory and sanitary manner.

A compressed egg beater is nearly as "fast as lightning." It beats eggs in 15 seconds and whips cream in one minute. An egg beater and mayonnaise mixer combined is also a useful household help.

A bread mixer insures good home made bread. The dough is not touched by the hands at all. In a few minutes the bread is mixed and the bread made in this manner is entirely digestible.

Paper bags for garbage pails are made of heavy manila paper. These provide a sanitary, clean method of handling the garbage.

It is no longer necessary to scrub in the old-fashioned way, which really splot drugery. The dustless mops help keep the floors clean, and to some of these mops can be attached a scrubbing brush. After the scrubbing is completed the brush can be removed and the mop substituted for drying the floor.

A new device for making sandwiches, which cuts them all alike, is easily adjusted to cutting thick or thin slices.

Lamps and Other Art Ware Notes about Floor Coverings

EXPERIENCE has taught us that the soft glow of a lamp dimmed by means of a handsome shade, is the most flattering light. As it is the first duty of every woman to look her best, one cannot be too particular in selecting a lamp which throws a light subdued by means of an artistic shade.

The whole world seems to have contributed to the display of lamps. Rarely have there been such unusual lamps shown as at present. Lamps which are exact copies of old antiques fit well with the antique furnishings so much in vogue.

For those who still cling to the Oriental furnishings, some exceptional pieces are found in the Damascus and Benares table or standing lamps. These have the shades lined with colored silk through which the light glimmers in a pleasing effect.

Chinese lamps are at the height of their popularity. If you possess a rare old Chinese vase, use it for the base of the lamp. A silk shade with panels of Chinese embroidery would be a suitable one for such a lamp.

A Chinese lamp which caught my fancy was constructed from an odd shaped black hawthorne rose jar with a gold mounting. Exactly matching this in color was the Chinese silk lamp shade.

For the summer home we find standing lamps in white enamel and in red with cretonne shades harmonizing with the other furnishings in the room. More pretentious standing lamps are of mahogany or carved wood with elaborate shades.

Silk fringe is now more popular than the bead fringe used so extensively in the past seasons. Silver and gold laces, little fancy cords, and silk roses are the principal ornamentations for the silk shades. A narrow old gold braid around the edge makes a happy finish. Crystal lamps with cretonne shades are summery and pretty. Pretty little gold composition lamps with silk shades can be purchased for ten dollars.

There is a genuine art value in some of the Teco pottery shown. Green is the tint used lavishly in the different pieces, but the colors of brown, russet, red, purples, grays, blues and yellows are also noted.

Rookwood Pottery is always new because each piece is distinctly different from every other piece. No two pieces of Rookwood Pottery are similar. A special series of vases have been designed under the name of Rookwood Ombroso, in order that the effects of shading may be shown to the best advantage. Some of these are decorated in intaglio patterns. The tones are usually gray and brown, but also they are delightful accents of blue, green and yellow.

Desk sets in a white ivory composition festooned with garlands of raised colored flowers are appropriate for the summer home as are the plain ones of Parisian Ivory.

There are many reproductions of Old Italian faience pieces with coloring and design peculiar to Italy. The decorations are those usually of a Greek or Roman Mythological nature.

Awaji ware comes from Japan and is much admired by those who like something different. The ware is rather heavy and comes in a dark gray, blue with a simple spray of white cherry blossoms. There are charming flower vases in this ware can be bought for $1.70. A low bowl of dull green pottery with a pottery flower holder which fits inside is very good for the porch table.

Some very beautiful pieces in Namura Pewter come from the Orient and is of a dull brownish silver color, which must be seen to be appreciated.

Bamboo baskets in shapely designs for flowers, fruits and sandwiches, are shown in all the shops. Odd bits of brass for the wall and table give a mellow glow to the room. From Russia comes the Samovar with a full equipment for serving tea. Long stemmed flowers look well in a tall pitcher of beaten brass.

If you possess any old pieces of brass, polish them up and make use of them for jardiniere and flower vases.

TO BE able to see the beautiful in a piece of old tapestry in a picture, or in a rare old rug, is a mark of educated taste.

Beautiful rugs, like beautiful pictures, have been in demand for centuries. When selecting a rug due thought must be given that the rug harmonizes with the furniture, woodwork and side walls, so that the predominating color shall be in keeping with the color scheme of the room.

As the family spends most time in the living room, discrimination should be exercised that the rug selected is serviceable and especially that it is appropriate for the room for which it is intended. For the living room selections may be made from the Persian, Samarkand, Shiraz and Beluchistan. For the dining room, unless the room be in mission style, a Sultanabad production is often preferred to any other. If the room is furnished in mission, then a Khiva Bokhara is most desirable.

For the bedrooms the smaller prayer rugs are much used, such as those of the Anatolian or Daghestan variety. The Nomad productions are especially suitable.

Many beautiful rugs are shown in the magazine, and hand tufted rugs. There seems to be a strong tendency to cover more of the room with large rugs, showing less margin of the floor. This produces a solid carpeted effect. When rugs are woven to order, or cut from carpet by the yard, they conform to the shapes of the room. These rugs come in plain self-tone and nondescript patterns. The rugs no longer contrast in color to the rooms, but rather harmonize.

The favorite colors which have the call today are the old blues, browns, soft shades of India red, and putty color or taupe. The latter is used extensively in high grade decorative schemes. The finer grades of Axminster and Wiltons show many Chinese effects. The price for a high grade Axminster is from $2 to $5 a yard. In these carpets dull ivory, old blue and burnt orange predominate.

The plain rugs are shown in rough wool effects with wide bands of a deeper tone of contrasting color.

For the summer home, there are fibre or grass rugs which come in key effect borders and two tone effects, that are advisable to purchase from an economical standpoint. These rugs in 9x12 sizes sell from $5.50 to $10.00.

The rag rugs still hold their own and new styles are continually being shown. Some cotton wash rugs come with picture borders, suitable for the nursery or bedroom. These rugs have the centers in delicate colors with the figured borders in the deeper shades.

A Few Suggestions about Wall Paper

TO CHOOSE wisely out of the many different designs offered for wall decoration, is after all not really such a strenuous task. One of the prime factors to be given consideration when selecting a decorative scheme is, "will the tints selected tend to darken or brighten the room?"

Wall paper is only an asset when placed upon the wall correctly, and in perfect harmony of color with the surrounding rooms, and in some way ought to be in accord with the character of the occupants. There is going to be a decided change in wall coverings for the coming season. Plain self-toned papers are going to be used more than ever in the new basket weaves, imitation grass cloths, crashes, jaspers, and tiffany blends, with small stencilled borders to match for the living rooms, halls, libraries and dining rooms. These are made in the new shades of mouse, camel, mulberry, putty, French gray, and Tuscan bronze. Some handsome effects are shown in small brocaded designs. Gray harmonizes beautifully with white wood work and mahogany furniture.

For those who prefer a figured paper, one which would go well with mahogany wood work, has a fine relief design with column effect on a white background.

After you have visited numerous wall paper shops you will realize how many different tones of gray there are. In a dark room an ivory, yellow, tan or a gray paper helps toward making the room cheerful in appearance. These colors also form good back grounds for wicker furniture and chintz furnishings.

A new idea for the bedroom is to paper them all alike in small plain stripes, checks and plain effects. The stripe tends to lighten a room more than flat paper, the border is a plain stripe about five inches in width. The decorative effects are carried out in cretonnes, printed linens, chintzes, and many soft silk novelties. This treatment lends itself to the charming effects that can be produced at small cost.

For colonial bedrooms there are plain papers with narrow borders in patterns exactly matching the cretonne furnishings. These borders are at the top of the wall and above the base.

With few exceptions the ceilings are white, soft shades of ivory and buff color.

The heavy reds and greens so universally used, are a thing of the past. The soft restful living rooms, quaint dining rooms, simple bed rooms with their chintz, cretonne and other overhangings, have come to stay a while.

The craze for Chinese effects is seen also in some of the new papers, these papers have attractive, bold designs of birds and flowers, but are not as restful to the eye as the papers of neutral tints.

A specialty for a distinctly Chinese room or hall which may not be generally useful, but is worth noting for its uniqueness, was printed on a yellow back ground. The paper comes in 12 panels, each one different, but together making a complete representation of a Chinese tropical garden. The birds, flowers, palms and trees are in Oriental colorings.

THE NEWEST in SPRING HABERDASHERY

Another novelty is a crocheted scarf, around the production of which is entwined a little story. Not long since it was reported that an important personage reputed to be an ardent of fashions was seen, wearing an Ascot. A maker of crocheted scarfs thought he saw in this report an opportunity to bring forth something new and a crocheted Ascot was the result. It was truly an exquisite production, but the Ascot failed to "come back."

Admiring one of these scarfs one day, a gentleman folded one of them about his thumb in the manner of a saleswoman demonstrating to a prospective customer how a four-in-hand would look when tied. The idea flashed upon him. Why not a four-in-hand that would tie in a small knot and spread immediately below the knot. The result was an order for a crocheted scarf three and a half to four inches wide except at that part which goes about the collar and that part which forms the knot. This scarf, worn with the popular high-cut waistcoat, gives the wearer the maximum of scarf within the minimum of waistcoat opening.

Later in the summer, the narrower forms of scarfs will be more called for, when the diagonal stripes, cross stripes and "below the knot" patterns will be the favorites when worn without the waistcoat. Madras stripes will be prominent. There will be a fair generality of colors, none of which can be said to lead.

That silk shirts will be the rage this Spring is practically certain. Silk shirtings will form the major part of the offerings of the shirtmaker and the haberdasher. A new idea which will be apparent in the shirt offerings of the exclusive haberdasher is this:

Spring are silk crepes in fancy designs, both figured and striped. Soft shirtings in line with the demand for silk shirtings are sure to be popular. Striped effects will be called for, particularly in the hairline variety of patterns, these permitting the pattern to show within the narrow limits of the waistcoat opening. The soft detachable collar to be worn with the shirt it is now believed will be as popular as ever. The function of the soft collar, however, is confined principally to outing uses or occasions and for lounging. While worn by some, on the streets of metropolitan centers, it cannot be said to be in altogether good taste. The careful dresser may concede its use for a half day at business, if the wearer intends to devote the remainder of the day to the golf links, the tennis court, or some other form of outing. The scope of the Madras collar is widening and it is thought that this collar may come into more general usage for just the purpose that the soft collar is licensed by the better dressers. Many new styles in Madras collars are to be shown than heretofore. In linen collars the cutaway styles are gaining in favor as distinguished from the close fitting types which for so long a time have retained the lead. The Spring will witness the cutaway collars in quite general use. By cutaway, of course, is meant those styles which come close together at the top and then cut away rounding. Another style that is said to be strong with many—a hot weather collar, comes to long points, touching the shirt front and falling flat upon it.

The proper thing in gloves will be those with the embroidered backs. They may be of chamamois, Mocha, kid or silk.

but the black embroidered backs are said to be the prevailing vogue. The chamamois is the thing for early Spring, while later in the season, the silk gloves will be stronger.

The city man, according to the dictates of fashion, should be gloved most of the time when on the street or in the open. In the sweltering days of the summer this may seem to be incongruous as a protection against the weather, but when one reflects upon the subject of how much of the dust he picks up each day the reason for wearing gloves is obvious. They save one of the embarrassment incident to having the hands soiled almost all the time, even though ordinary care has been exercised.

Silk gloves afford the desired protection with a minimum of weight.

Handkerchiefs favored by men this Spring are said to be the white on white effects in linen. This term is used to designate the patterns composed all of white. They are woven as to give it various patterns. A corded effect, a checked or plaid effect, some with plain centers and borders of this white on white order a pretty combination, and are among the numerous patterns from which to select.

That Athletic underwear is gaining is also considered quite certain. It is said that the union suit is gaining in general use. A combination dress shirt and athletic drawers, all in one, has been shown recently. Its reception proved its merit. Many will be in use.

The 1913 Cadillacs

ELECTRIC LIGHTED AND STARTED

The facts about it are given here. But before you can appreciate its utter perfection you must come and see the car itself

A year's experience on twelve thousand 1912 Cadillacs has perfected the Cadillac system so it is still in the lead. The simplified and improved electric power plant for starting, lighting and ignition turns over the engine twice as fast and twice as long, saves weight, is even more fool proof than the 1912 model and prevents theft of the car by providing a Yale lock in the ignition switch.

The 1913 Cadillac has 25 per cent more power produced by a long stroke engine, 4 1-2 inch bore by 5 3-4 inch stroke. Horse power 40-50.

The engine has been silenced to a point beyond belief by enclosed valve mechanism and silent chain drive to auxiliary shafts.

Riding comfort has been increased by a longer wheel base 120 inches, longer rear springs and 10-inch upholstery.

Standard equipment now includes 36-inch by 4 1-2 inch tires, demountable rims, mohair top, ventilating, rain-vision, rain shield, Warner speedometer.

Clothing Styles for Spring

There is little difference between the clothes worn this Spring by the young man and those worn by his father. Of course, we are talking about the suit for business.

Indications favor a sedate season; quiet patterns predominate in suits for business wear. In general it may be said that sharp black and white effects, club checks, dog-tooth patterns and narrow stripes are the leading pattern features. Of these, however, there is almost an endless array. Gray effects largely predominate. Admittedly this is a gray season. Browns, by their nature a Fall and Winter color, have been taken to kindly by men other Spring and Summer seasons, but this Spring they are less in evidence and those that are seen are confined mostly to the lounge suit or, as we have come to call it in America, the recreation suit, of which more will be said later.

Flannels have never had such a vogue as this Spring, and the wonderful effects produced make it difficult to understand the magical effect of the word "imported" so frequently used as a selling argument by the tailor and clothier. We have a habit of raving over anything said to be imported, especially in fabrics. If we knew the real facts, viz., that in many such cases the cloth in question was produced in our own mills, we might be less effusive over the "imported" idea, and marvel instead at the ingenuity of our own weavers. Velours and cassimeres will also be strong.

The ultra-fashionable man favors this class of fabrics for business and for recreation. Last Spring attested that. This Spring, flannels, cassimeres and velours compose even a greater proportion of the patterns than previously, and the ingenuity of each weaver's art, seemed to outdo that of the others. The result may be seen now among the advance showings of the exclusive clothier and tailor.

Club lines and hairline stripes and dark grounds, black or blue, are sure to be favorites with men who cling to the more conservative in apparel as do also modulated club checks. The wonderful range of originality evident in patterns exhibit the adaptability of flannels to the clothes requirements for the Spring season.

Scotch roughs, a term used here to designate the productions of Scottish mills, more particularly tweeds and homespun, are also said to be favored made in the regulation general utility suit as well as for suits of the recreation sort. Hit and miss patterns and some handsome effects in what are termed knob (pronounced with the long sound on the o) goods. The latter are distinctly of the Scotch type of goods, the peculiar characteristic of which is that at irregular or accidental intervals in the pattern a sort of knob forms which stands out prominently on the surface of the goods. The effect is a fortunate one and makes up in one of the most attractive though modest novelties that has appeared for some seasons.

The business man this Spring will wear a business sack, a three-button coat about thirty-one and a half inches long, conforming only to the so-called English coat in that it is made without padding, has a roll or semi-roll collar and long lapels with rounded corners. The rounding at the lower outline of the coat front may vary. This model is to be much worn by the man who is afraid to be too modishly attired while about his business. This will give a man a neat model that conforms to the conventional closely enough not to be considered ultra. It has been pointed out too that some men cannot wear the more ultra models and for them this model is splendidly adapted. The waistcoat of this model, like those of practically all the Spring models, is cut so as to allow little opening or the space.

For Summer the skeleton or half-lined coat is worn extensively. The young man or the man who dresses young can with utmost propriety go a step farther in conformance with the English idea or as it has been aptly called, "The American idea of what an English coat should be." A famous Paris boulevardier says, "It is not so much the clothing as the manner in which it is worn." This is a rule that can well be borne in mind in the selection of one's style.

Coats showing a large expanse of linen at the neck and end of the sleeves are not remiss for the young man in business. A model known as the English sack coat, cut on an average length of thirty and one-half inches, is adaptable to this use. This coat has the soft roll collar and lapel, is semi-form fitting, has rounded corners throughout, cut low in back to hug the collar snugly and has small sleeves. The waistcoat is cut high and the trousers straight, and not too long.

The waistcoat will be much worn with the English style of coat, and in order that the three-piece suit be made comfortable a skeleton or half-lined coat has been brought out. It is commonly said that less two-piece suits will be worn this Spring and Summer than for some seasons past.

While much has been said about cuffs on coats being remiss, this model looks well with cuffs about one inch wide and with two buttons on the sleeve. The young man whose ideas of dress are advanced, can safely wear modest cuffs on this model of coat. Coming now to recreation clothes, one may with perfect propriety come out with more brilliant plumage, thus reflecting glorious nature with which one mingles more in the Spring and the Summer. Every man's finished wardrobe can safely have several suits of the recreation sort. If there is any vestige of doubt about the correctness of cuffs on the coat of the every day utility suit, for the young man who dresses in conformity with advanced ideas of dress all doubt can be dispelled with reference to their correctness on the recreation suit—and patch pockets, too. Don't be misled about patch pockets. They are all right, that is on the outing suit, whether it is of a Scotch rough material, a flannel or tropical worsted.

The strictly recreation suit for Spring and Summer is the most remote form of suit from the so-called English coat. This later coat is nearly always skeleton or half-lined and may be worn with or without the waistcoat. The golf and the equestrian season brings into use newer forms for these sports. A Norfolk coat with knickerbockers is the correct thing for golf. For those who indulge in the healthful sport of riding, a more radical change is in store. The whipcord, so long a favorite for riding coat and breeches, tailors say will be relegated to disuse and in its stead will appear the black and white flannel and the gamekeeper tweeds. The cut does not differ so materially from that of the past season. Either lace or buttons are considered all right.

The well appointed wardrobe will not be without a morning coat. This coat in one of its forms is the correct thing to wear with striped worsted trousers at weddings and other day social functions. The correct thing, of course, is the cutaway frock, which may be of black unfinished worsted or an oxford gray.

The cutaway of the models which are being favored most this Spring is not as extreme as is the more strictly English morning coat, nor is the style to be confounded with the walking coat. It is a happy medium. The description of two models will be of interest. The first, an oxford gray, three-button model, with flat lapel and collar. This model is correct either with or without braided edges, just as one feels disposed. If bound it is with a flat braid, three-eighths to one-half inch wide. This latter is a novel, though elite style. The binding of the edge extends away around the collar. The one breast pocket is bound at edge. The other model is made of a checked oxford, and has a moderately rolling lapel, rolling below the upper of the three buttons. The upper buttonhole is finished on both sides. It should be worn with two buttons only in use. Skirts of the Spring models are slightly shorter than former seasons.

The clever dresser has a top coat. He ought to have two, one for Spring and another for Fall. He may also have a raincoat, very likely has, but this should not take the place of the top coat. Scotch goods are adapted to this purpose as are also tweeds and plaid chevrons. A prediction is that coverts will again be prominent in Spring top coats, but this Spring is a little early for this to be expected.

THIS, the Spring of the year, is the time when a man's thoughts of dress turn from the sombre apparel of winter to the brighter things permissible for wear with the approach of warmer days. Men's clothing, offered now, displays a variety that will suffice in style of cut or pattern to satisfy the most fastidious and the diversified tastes of all. There is a growing favor toward patterns that have a "punch," and it is also true that those which appeal to the young man of today appeal with equal force to the middle-aged business man. The latter may not like the cut, popular with the younger element, but he likes the fabric pattern and insists on getting it. But the young man's suit for Spring is built along conservative lines, so

IT IS quite certain that the tendency in hat styles this Spring is distinctly toward the smooth finishes, and for no other reason than because the wearer wants them. Rough hats are easier to make it is true, and there is more profit in them, so some retailers may push them, but when the wearer demands smooth finished goods that is what they must have, opinions to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Outside the staple shades of gray and tan, one of the most talked of colors this Spring is green, a color that is now much in evidence in some of the leading fashion centers of the world. According to several of the best authorities in the trade, green will be the best selling color among the novelties of this Spring, not the vivid shade of green that killed itself so promptly a few seasons ago, but more subdued effects that are in better taste. In fact, the new shades of green are soft, beautiful colors that are exceedingly attractive, not decided green, but blendings of colors that possess a marked tinge of green. There is also some prospect that a very dark, navy blue will appeal to well dressed men.

It is probable that in Derbies, as well as in soft hats, the better dresser will demand somewhat higher crowns and naturally narrower brims, 5 and 5½ crowns with 1½ to 2 inch brims. In both particulars the color and the shape, these are in the nature of somewhat radical departures from the tendency of the past few seasons. Fashion has favored the low crowned, wide brim types, but with the continuance of the English strain in clothing designs in which narrowness is the feature, the wide brim hat style would seem to the average American mind rather incongruous, and this is forcing the careful dresser to the narrower styles of derby which seem more in harmony with the entire clothing scheme.

In soft hats this tendency is also apparent, the wide brims gradually giving way to the narrow brim models, to be worn creased in the center. A contingent among the younger element, it is thought, may not be so readily influenced by this radical though inevitable change for the present season, and these will wear the style that has become popular in the past few seasons, but the exclusive element, those who set the styles, the English effect in hats will rule for some seasons to come.

An extremely light weight flexible flat-brim hat finished with a braid is also a popular model.

A model that is gaining popularity with the young man is a soft hat, which comes in all the popular shades, though there is a preponderance of greens, with a flat brim and a welt edge that is worn turned down all the way round. On these the bow is on the quarter or at the back. Five to 5½ inch crowns will be popular in these styles. The curled edge 4½ inch crown with 2 inch brim also promises to be a favorite.

For golfing and outdoor sports the large shaped cap of tweeds and fancy chevrons will be much worn. Speaking of straws, semis both rough and smooth effects will be favorites, rough semis being popular for novelty styles. Fancy tap beads, straw hats are in some demand. Rough straws are gaining in favor and it is probable that more will be worn this Spring than for some seasons. Along the general tendency toward high crown, low brim dimensions in men's headwear, straw hats in the better grades are favored in such dimensions as 3x2½ and 3x2¼. Panamas are as popular as ever and possibly more so in medium dimensions.

BY CHARLES W. GALLOWAY.

THAT Norfolk for little men will be popular is attested by the preparations of those who see the trend of fashion's way. Everywhere it is said Norfolk has been running ahead of the field. Norfolk of every description, with box, knife and inverted plaits and various kinds of belts, loose and sewn, half and full lengths. It is safe to say that they will be highly popular for next spring, with a shading in the call the following season. Soft, rough materials will be used, the call for hard faced worsteds having dwindled almost to nothing. Norfolk will be popular at all ages from five to eighteen.

A chic style for the boy who is about to don his first pair of long trousers is called the Junior School Suit. The coat is made in one of the variations of the Norfolk. The trousers, which are cut straight and are finished at the bottom with cuffs, come to a point just above the oxford shoe top. Still another is styled after the modified manish English styles.

For boys still in knickerbockers, a couple of neat and exceedingly good models are said to be gaining considerable interest. One is a coat, cut on mannish lines, with patch pockets, and a belt extending all the way around and buttoning in the front. A modification of this model, which is arousing an equal amount of interest is one cut the same, but with a half belt sewed at the sides, gathering the back into plaits.

For ten to eighteen year old boys a popular style will be a knickerbocker three-piece suit, coat, trousers and vest, the latter garment made with a narrow white edging at the opening.

Foreign fabrics will compose a considerable part of the clothing offered for boys. Real imported Scotch cloths and domestic Scotch effects will be strong. Small neat effects in sharp black and white combinations are expected to be favorites as are also blue serges and fancy blue cloths. Aside from the serges, the rough faced fabrics will largely prevail in class boys' clothing. Worsteds of the hard faced varieties have for some seasons played a large part in boys' clothing, but in men's, but even this proportion is diminishing.

In the little boys' suits, that is from three to six years of age, the straight, short trousers will give a touch of difference to this Spring's clothing. This is true of wool and of wash suits.

Russians and Sailors in various modified forms are the proper thing for juveniles. In the former the bishop collar is a new feature that has taken well. In one of the models which is expected to lead, the bishop collar may or may not be worn, at the option of the wearer, the neck being finished with a collar of the same material as the suit, which the bishop collar covers when the latter is worn. A silk cord to tie in a bow at the neck is another feature of some of these collared suits. Black and white checks, plain browns, plain blues and fancy grays are the leading colors in juveniles' suits.

The Peter Thompson style, it is also predicted by those who watch the style tendencies closely, will be a popular style for little boys. The middy is a favorite with many, especially those who want to get away from the Russians and Sailors. There is little that is new in either, except in the trimming and the middy gives the "something different" so much desired by mothers in their children's clothing. They come in blue cloth and also in white, the latter being properly classed among the wash suits.

Wash suits are gaining in popularity for all seasons, though they are essentially the suit for summer. Chambrays, Gaieties and kindergarten cloths compose most of them. Prices range up to $8.75. Some are hand embroidered. The bishop collar is to be found on many of the wash suits.

The white middy trimmed with blue braid, with shield on the arm, and a middy hat to match is certain to be a popular summer combination. A Beach suit, made with short sleeves, low neck and straight pants is a vacation specialty as is also a one-piece suit on the order of a romper.

Probably the most decided tendency in all small boys' clothing, that is short pants suits, is that toward the straight, knee pants instead of the knickerbocker. This is an English style, and as we are on a sort of an English wave in men's apparel at the present time it is but natural that boys' clothing will follow similar lines. Little rubberized coats with hoods to match and rubber boots if desired, make a good rainy day combination.

A novelty for the boy who rides horseback and likewise a play garment has appeared in the form of genuine "chaps" such as used by the cowboys. They are to be had in Khaki, leather or with genuine goat skin fore parts, and sell from three dollars up to eleven. They are said to be made in the exact manner as those worn in the "real wild west." Caps to match suits will be prominent. Plaid hats and caps also will be in evidence. The Tyrolean style hat is meeting with great favor. Bobbies and Rah-rah hats will also be favorites with the boys.

Footwear For The Fashionable

INFINITELY more care is being exercised by men about their foot dress. Top notch young men, especially those who adhere to the Americanized English idea of dress, whose cuffed trouser legs reach only to a point above the tops of his oxfords or just below the tops of his higher shoes are impelled to be more careful because of the expense of footwear is exposed to view all the time. It is imperative, therefore, that his foot dress presents a clean cut, neat appearance. In general characteristics it may be said that the low broad heel broad shank style will be dominant.

The ultra-fashionable man will favor the English style, distinguishable by the flange heel and the receding toe. This is known also as the Custom last, and is denominated in other ways, all meaning about the same. Russian tan will be the favored finish in this particular last and lace style predominates. The strong outlook for spring is that the high, broad toe oxford will be much worn. An eight-button model of this type is shown. This forepart effect is a fine shape for style and comfort, and has a distinct smartness that has commended it through all parts of the

For those who might look upon this decidedly knob toe as somewhat too radical, there is another, a wide toe model, but without the pronounced knob.

Another favored model is one, an extreme from the above, with low receding toe and heel conforming with the general characteristics set forth in the forepart of this review. It is deemed probable that the exclusive man who regards fashion's dictates closely will take to this shape.

Buttons will continue to hold the adherents gained in recent seasons, though there seems to be a tendency apparent favoring laces. The Blucher is not expected to be so strong, the regular lace being favored.

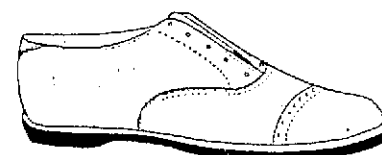

Dull finished calf will be extensively worn, as will also tan. The previously anticipated falling of tans did not materialize in the measure expected. Patent leathers, however, will be worn more, if the early signs are correctly read. The smart dresser will have shoes to harmonize well with his attire in general, which may require that he have all the best finishes in his wardrobe.

Novelties in footwear are not numerous. Just as well that they are not.

Seldom are these in good taste except for recreation purposes and then this fitness depends much on the wearer and his other apparel. (One novelty for illustration to show the extent that some will go in this matter.) This is a sterling patent leather low shoe with five eyelets, and is fashioned after the general lines previously referred to, except that it has a white rubber sole—no heel. On the board walk or in the summer parks, this novelty or others might not be remiss if other apparel coincides.

A novelty that is in somewhat better taste and which may create quite a demand is made of leather, other than patent, has a leather slip sole and a rubber outersole. The heel is the wedge style.

For golf, or tennis and outdoor sports, there seems to be no one style in the lead among the innumerable specialties which are to be offered. Canvas shoes and combination canvas and leather shoes with low heels are suitable. All of the foregoing has been on the subject of the oxford. For the elder man who clings to the higher shoe there seems to be no distinct style edict, but our discernment is that high or semi-high toe will be the favorite.

A Reasonable Plea For The Stomach

If Your Stomach Is Lacking In Digestive Power, Why Not Help The Stomach Do Its Work?

Not with drugs, but with a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach. Scientific analysis shows that digestion requires pepsin, nitrogenous ferments, and the secretion of hydrochloric acid. When your food fails to digest, it is proof positive that some of these agents are lacking in your digestive apparatus.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain, notwithstanding the fact that they are necessary to digestion and when placed at work in the weak stomach and small intestines, supply what these organs need. They stimulate gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been subjected to critical chemical tests at home and abroad and are found to contain nothing but natural digestives.

London, 9th Aug., 1905. I have analyzed most carefully a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets (which I bought myself at a city chemist's shop for the purpose), manufactured by the F. A. Stuart Co., 85 Clerkenwell Road, London, E. C., and have to report that I cannot find any trace of vegetable or mineral poisons. Knowing the ingredients of the tablets, I am of opinion that they are admirably adapted for the purpose for which they are intended. (Signed)

John R. Brooke, F. I. C., F. C. S. There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Their composition is commonly known among physicians. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, water brash, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and kindred diseases originating from improper digestion and assimilation of foods, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and powerful remedy. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

BUILDERS' EXCHANGE IS ORGANIZED HERE

Janesville Contractors Behind Movement to Establish Building Headquarters—Plan to Incorporate.

Plans of the Janesville contractors to establish a builders' and traders' exchange, which have been pending for some time past were definitely made known at a meeting at the office of Van Pool Brothers on North River street last evening.

Arrangements have already been made for a headquarters and exhibit room in the Sutherland block over the Amos Kohberg clothing store and incorporation papers will be taken out as soon as the details of organization can be carried through.

On Friday and Saturday of this week the contractors will go to Milwaukee to attend the first annual meeting of the state organization of Master Carpenters which was formed last summer. At this time the Janesville men expect to discuss the matter of an exchange with the officers and members of the Milwaukee society and will secure valuable suggestions in regard to organization.

While the local contractors are behind the proposition any material men, wholesale or retail, who reside in Janesville, and contractors who live outside of the city, will be eligible to membership. Dealers who sell any sort of material used in building will be urged to join the society and to place exhibits of their material in the exhibit room. In addition outside material companies may rent space in the exhibit room where they can display their products.

According to the plans as announced there will be a display of all sorts of brick, tile, lumber, millwork, plumbing and hardware, fixtures, gas and electric fixtures, paper, paints and varnishes and all sorts of materials used in the building trade.

Besides that the rooms will be a headquarters for the master carpenters, master painters and master plumbers, and here they will hold their regular meetings. The rooms will be in charge of a permanent secretary and plans and specifications of all important buildings to be erected in Janesville and other sections of the state will be received so that the local contractors will have a chance of making out their bids at the exchange.

The exchange will also be the headquarters for any one who is planning on building any kind of a structure. He will have an opportunity to inspect the goods of all the different dealers and determine just what kind or what brand of material he wishes to use. After his plans have been drawn he will have the privilege of placing them at the exchange where the contractor will bid on them. In this way the exchange will serve the public in equal degree with its own members.

Work of remodeling the rooms in the Sutherland block will be started within a few days. There will be a good sized meeting room, a secretary's office, and the large exhibit room which will be well lighted and equipped.

The local contractors who are behind the movement are: J. A. Denning, Ford and Boos, Van Pool Brothers, W. R. Hayes, E. Pautz, A. M. Mead, and J. P. Cullen. Other cities in the state who have similar societies are Milwaukee, Racine, La Crosse and Madison. The Madison exchange was recently organized with 68 members.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

DAVID LIVINGSTONE.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

David Livingstone, a Scotchman with a heart of oak and a scintillating brogue, was born one hundred years ago today and died in the heart of Africa May 1, 1873. He was a medical missionary and the first white man to introduce the Pringle Albert coat and the dissolving pill to the natives of the dark continent.

The story of Livingstone's life is more fascinating than one of Horatio Alger's books, but is not read as often by the rising generation. On his first visit to Africa his passage was disputed by a lion, which broke one of his arms while the explorer was feeling around for a vital spot with a shotgun. It was on this trip that Livingstone met the nearly lost, but brilliant, Zulu, which he had no use for for thirteen years, with the result that when he returned home he didn't have much in the way of conversation except the Zulu dialect.

While at home, Livingstone wrote a book of travel which brought in about $30,000, which he used to sink in a steamer to carry him back to Africa. He discovered a lot of places in Africa which nobody has ever visited since, on account of the disagreeable table manners of the natives whom he found short on clothes and long on appetite. Every fall several of the tribes would go to war and slaughter each other with great abandon, in order to lay in a supply of meat that would last until spring. Whenever Livingstone objected to this, they would run him out of the reservation and steal his pan-cake flour.

After Livingstone had discovered about all of Africa that was worth keeping, no word came from him for years. Henry M. Stanley began to poke around the dark continent in search of him and finally found him under a banyan tree, surrounded by a picked assortment of native hares, hares and head cooks. He refused to return, preferring to die among the people he had come to serve. When he passed on, the recording angel wrote another name high in the list of the martyred of the earth.

A Stirring Story of Military Adventure and of a Strange Wartime Wooing, Founded on the Great Play of the Same Name

Here the colonel paused a moment in silence and made his peculiar gesture of violently brushing something aside from before his face.

"Frank is a man now," he said at last. "I couldn't trust myself to see him—and, anyway, he must now stand on his own pins. We all must, for these are desperate days and rebellious boys are not the only concern by a long way. But, here—the colonel carefully took something from his breast pocket—I will send him something to make a man of him if any thing can. He will understand. I know he loves you as if you were his own mother. Possibly he has some little tenderness for his father also. If he has I think he will look tenderly upon this picture and at the same time remember me."

"A miniature portrait of me!" gasped Mrs. Haverill as she received it from her husband's hands.

"Yes; the one you gave me before we were married. I have never been without it a single hour since. I have carried it through every campaign and in many a scene of danger on the plains. You see what a sentimental old ruffian I am now, don't you? Never mind. Frank is a fugitive from justice. God only knows what his future will be."

CHAPTER III.

Parting of the Ways.

A STRANGE feeling of excitement, something like exhilaration, was in the air at Charleston that morning of April 12, Henry Clay's birthday, as more than one of the Ellingham household had remarked. In a way that cannot signal roaring against Sumter had come as a relief to the general tension not only at the South Carolina storm center, but everywhere, north and south. It was the decisive beginning of what all now knew to be inevitable war.

When Colonel Haverill reflected upon the calamity pending over the country his own personal griefs and annoyances sank into insignificance. It was the same with the elderly southerners, and the personal greetings and commiserations of that day were marked by grave courtesy and kindness.

From earliest daybreak every available place on the harbor side was thronged by ladies and gentlemen, old and young, white folk and black, viewing the spectacle of the bombardment. Troops came pouring into Charleston, but were held in reserve, the forces already manning the score of batteries now in action against Sumter being more than ample. Civilians of various descriptions were arriving from all directions on horseback, afoot and in every species of antiquated or improvised conveyance. Far out seaward could be described the vessels sent by the Federal government for the relief of the beleaguered fortress, and it was rumored that they would still make an attempt to throw reinforcements into the place.

Meanwhile Major Anderson, within the fort, had withstood his fire until long after daylight, when parapets were knocked down and breaches began to appear in the masonry of the walls where the thirteen inch shells from the mortars struck, and smoke and flames from burning sheds told of havoc wrought within.

When he was "god and ready," as they said, Anderson opened fire with offer Anderson the "most" favorable terms of capitulation—evacuation with permission to salute the flag and to march out with the honors of war, with their arms and private baggage. Under these conditions his brave defense having won him the best possible terms and knowing that further resistance would mean useless sacrifice of life, Major Anderson without humiliation hoisted the white flag over Sumter and entered into negotiations for the surrender of the fortress.

President Lincoln had called for 75,000 troops to suppress the rebellious combination of the southland and to "cause the laws to be duly executed."

stamped "paper, with 'full' military formalities. I have secured the necessary passports north—here is yours. I am ordered direct to Washington and shall start with Mrs. Haverill at once. You will report to Captain Lyon of the Second regiment in St. Louis."

With what a different manner of paternal tenderness did the colonel lay his hand on the shoulder of Lieutenant Robert Ellingham, as if he hated to speak the words that meant a long farewell.

Bob felt less restraint in going over the same ground again when the time of leaving came for him and Kerchival.

"Our state is to be the chief battle ground, according to present predictions," he said, with the weight of fifty years suddenly added to his stature as a Virginian. "But every loyal son of Virginia will follow her flag. It is our religion."

"That may be all right for you, Bob—I am not blaming you," responded Kerchival. "But my state is New York. If New York had gone back on the old flag—your father's and mine—well, New York might go to the devil. That's my religion."

They walked out, Robert and Madeline, along the battery wall by the sea, in silence, as if by mutual rendezvous. "This is the last we shall be together for the present, anyway, Miss Madeline," poor Bob began.

"I'm afraid so," murmured Madeline.

"But we shall meet again—some time," he went on desperately; "that is, if we both live."

"If we both live," repeated Madeline, in an awestricken tone. "Oh, Robert, you mean if you live, I suppose. So you are going, too, into this dreadful war, is it?"

"Yes, Madeline, I must. It is fate—yours and mine together—Isn't it, dearest girl? You don't deny it, and that gives 'me' courage." "You know" what duty means. And you know what love means, too, don't you? Madeline, I do love you. I shall always love you, come what may. There, fate has granted me this much—allowed me to tell you how I love you—and nothing can take this moment away from us at least, thank God! And I have the strongest kind of faith in me now that our story isn't going to be cut short here. It may be interrupted. We've got to be tried by fire, maybe, but I can stand it if—"

"I shall keep watch upon fate."

For the rest of their time together their silences were more eloquent than their words.

Lieutenant Kerchival West passed through one more dramatic scene before quitting Charleston.

In an obscure tavern by the water front he found Frank Haverill, a slender, young desperado, whose bold, dissipated look had something strangely attractive about it and whose gentlemanly speech and manner belied a certain affection of hardness and bravado.

All this latter was swept away by the sudden, violent wave of emotion that visibly rushed over his whole being when West delivered Mrs. Haverill's message and handed him the lock of containing the portrait miniature.

With an oath on his lips and tears running down his hardened face he cried out hoarsely:

"I've been a fool, an ungrateful dog, and I've deserved jail and worse. And I'll stand the gulf and not blame any one but myself either. But, by heaven, I'm glad now that you settled with that Thornton before I got to him. And I came down here to Charleston to seek him as a friend! Now, listen, Lieutenant West, and I want you to tell this to my father and to my dearest mother, for she is that—here he kissed the miniature fervently—"tell them that I deserve the worst that can happen to me, but that I didn't desert my wife."

"Poor girl! She only allowed that story to go out in order to throw them off the track and help me to escape, as I did. Now she will know that the colonel and Mrs. Haverill know the truth, and that will comfort her more than the money they are sending her. God bless them! And it would comfort me, too, if anything could, but nothing can, except one thing, and that is fight and plenty of it. I want to fight my way back to self respect, to honor, and show those who have stuck by me that I'm worth saving after all. No matter what happens, thank God I've still got freedom to fight!"

"Do you mean that you'll enlist?" asked West.

"Yes, Lieutenant. I can't get to Washington quick enough."

"In the Federal army, of course?"

"Surely—in the fight for the Union."

"Belle, for you, Frank!" cried the officer, impulsively grasping the boy's hand. "That will be splendid news for the colonel."

The somber scowl overspread Frank Haverill's face again. He rose to his feet and said earnestly:

"No, Lieutenant West. I charge you, upon honor, not to tell my father—not to tell any one—but to keep this a secret between ourselves. It will be time enough for them to know when I have proved myself a man again. Lieutenant, I am going to Washington to enlist. But that is all that will be known about me for the present, perhaps forever. Even if you hear of me in the days to come it won't be under the name of Frank Haverill."

"I am going to start all over again under a new name, which won't have a spot of dishonor on it, and Uncle Sam and Father Abraham Lincoln will have a brand new recruit, born today. Do you understand, Lieutenant? That sweet lady, heaven's own angel mother to me, has stooped down and grabbed me out of hell, and she shall yet have reason to be glad that she did so or my father will never set eyes on his son again."

When Colonel Haverill arrived in Washington, which at that period had not yet outgrown the aspect of a shiftless, overgrown Virginia town, he found it transformed into a vast, chaotic military camp. Every incoming train from Baltimore or from the west brought its regiment of raw recruits, who were driven like cattle to the barracks and drill grounds on the Potomac flats, near the end of the Long bridge and within sight of the steeples and roofs of Alexandria, where on a clear day the southern flag could be seen from the very windows of the White House, floating defiantly.

While Washington was getting ready to send the Army of the Potomac to invade Virginia, Robert Ellingham reported to General Lee in Richmond, 115 miles to the southward, and found the new Confederate capital likewise seething with activity.

In Case of Emergency.

In every well-ordered household a box of bandages should be kept in case of accident. Bandages should be torn from old linen or muslin and wound tightly in rolls. They should be of various widths. Also supply stout, narrow strips for tying. It is advisable to place these bandages in the oven for a few minutes to sterilize them. Then place in a hot, wide-mouthed preserve jar and screw on the lid while all are still hot.

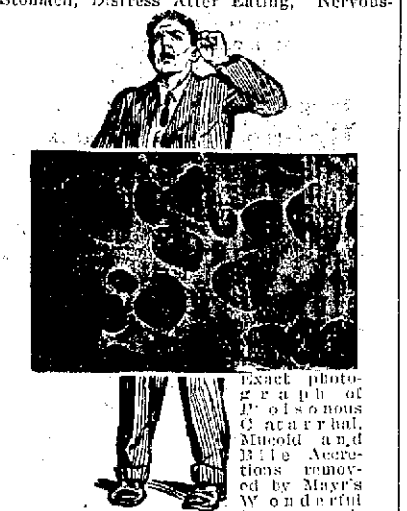

Critic of Epigram.

"Young man," said Mr. Hibrow, "have you read the proverbs of Solomon?" "Oh, yes," replied the confident youth; "and some of 'em are pretty good. But I think they'd be better if they had some funny pictures with them."
